Bootlegging Up, Silver Down

Two Great Birthdays

We Postpone, France Not

For Rail and Highways

By Arthur Brisbane

MR. MILL, investigating for Mr. Curtis, finds that fifty million dollars are needed to finance the great rum fleet operating off the Atlantic coast. Fleets of fast rum runners to escape and outwit the Coast Guard, big ocean steamers, millions invested in whiskey, and a wide margin to allow for seizures and losses are necessary.

The man well-dressed, of few words, able to look to the right and left in a quarter of a second as he offers supplies "right off the boat" is usually not a bootlegger on his own account. He is a high pressure salesman, working for a syndicate on a commission basis and drawing account. Bootlegging carries a heavy payroll.

Bootlegging has reached the fifty million dollar "big business" stage.

And simultaneously the business of producing and selling silver is dwindling away in a manner that threatens the world's prosperity. The silver in an English shilling today, with a face value of 24 cents, is worth actually three cents. Your silver dollar is worth intrinsically a fraction more than 12 cents.

Two great birthdays, biggest in American history, are in this month. Tomorrow will be the 122nd anniversary of Lincoln's birthday. It reminds you that wealth and elaborate education are not necessary to usefulness. A boy could carry all the books that Lincoln had opened when he was elected President.

The qualities born in his brain, inherited from his father and mother, and ancestors 1,000,000 years back, made him what he was.

If he had succeeded in his efforts to secure a modest position in the Interior Department, Lincoln might have gone through life unknown. But none the less he would have been Abraham Lincoln.

Thousands of men as great have lived and died "without fame" and many are alive now that will never be heard of. A combination of power, circumstances and opportunity are necessary in the making of a great man.

The birthday of Washington, in 10 days, will remind the country that the richest man can be a true patriot, and put his country's welfare and the liberties of his fellow citizens ahead of his own selfish interests.

We decide to postpone the building of airplanes, submarines, airplane carriers and cruisers with airplane platforms for fear of arguments resulting in a special session.

The French, logical, determined, allowing nothing to interfere with national defense, proceed to build a series of armored cruisers of 23,000 tons each to offset the marvelously efficient German cruisers, called "miniature battleships."

And France will continue building submarines. She knows that airplanes and submarines represent in the highest degree the power to punish other nations, and that the nation with power to punish is the one that will not be provoked or attacked.

If anybody attacked THIS nation, through the air, it could only burst into tears. It isn't prepared to resent or punish anything.

In Britain a car called the "Ro-rail," with two sets of wheels, has been successfully tried on British railroad tracks and highways. On the tracks it rolls on regular steel wheels. Arrived at the end of its rail journey, rubber tired wheels are lowered below the level of the steel car wheels which are inside of the wheels with pneumatic rubber tires.

And the coach motor bus or truck is ready to leave rails and finish its journey on the highway.

If our railroads used such vehicles, motor trucks and buses could not successfully compete with railroads between large cities as they do now.

And the value of the railroads' rights of way would be at least double.

The stock markets woke up happy in New York and London yesterday. Heavy stock buying in the New York market indicated two things, first, that many believe a permanent advance has started; second, many are willing to "try, try again."

Whether this is the time to buy stocks that have dropped below 40, and will eventually go above 100, remains to be seen. There is no doubt that when the next boom does start it will be full of energy, and soon cause speculators to forget how recently they said, "Never again."

HARVARD BOYS CONFESS TO 'PRANK' IN GROTON

Jenkins Says He and Merriman Were the "Vandals," but Exonerate Leonard

EXCLUSIVE!

(Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American)

Edward K. Jenkins, Harvard student, and Daniel Merriman, former Harvard student and son of a Harvard professor, played the pranks at Groton School which were characterized by Groton and Harvard authorities as vandalism.

To the Boston Evening American, exclusively, the youths admitted today they were the perpetrators of the joke played in Groton School chancel.

They told the story frankly and exonerated completely the other accused student Robert J. Leonard, Jr.:

EXPECT TO BE "FIRED"

Leonard, they declared, had nothing to do with their "fun" in the chancel when they hid the cross in the bushes, hid the ancient Groton Bible in rubbish in the basement and sank the crew coach's launch in Lake Nagog.

Just as frankly they forecast that they would be "fired out" of Harvard when the university authorities act on their case next Tuesday.

"It is inevitable," declared Jenkins, whose home is in New York City. "They can't do anything else. We did it, and it's done—and that's all there is to it."

Jenkins, spokesman for the trio, told the full story to Boston Evening American representatives while the three Harvardians were gathered in Jenkins' room.

NOTHING TO CONCEAL

In his shirtsleeves and smoking cigarette after cigarette, the New Yorker paced up and down the

VOLSTEAD NEAR DEATH IN WEST

St Paul, Minn., Feb. 11 (INS)—Former Congressman Andrew J. Volstead, father of the dry law, was reported near death today.

Amos W. Woodcock, national prohibition director, was only permitted to see the former congressman, who now is legal adviser for the northwest prohibition enforcement department, for a few minutes.

"Mr. Volstead is very low," Woodcock said as he left the Volstead residence. "I should not have asked to see him if I had realized how serious his condition is."

Volstead underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis Friday. He failed to rally and a weak heart has made the dry leader's case very critical.

Mayor's Plea for Greater City Is Lost

Legislative bills of Mayor Curley and Prof. Joseph H. Beal of Harvard for a Greater Boston system of government, were put over for a year today by the legislative committee on metropolitan affairs. The bills, in substance, provided for the consolidation of all cities and towns within a radius of 20 miles of Boston under one head to be governed under the so-called borough system.

The boundary lines were to be determined by the present metropolitan water and park systems.

Marian Eddy Plans to Fly the Atlantic

London, Feb. 11 (INS)—Miss Marian Eddy, young American pilot, plans a solo flight across the Atlantic this summer.

"I have planned out the entire flight," says Miss Eddy. "If I leave New York one evening in the summer when the moon is at the full I shall be able to make the whole flight to Paris with very little darkness."

We Start Upward

THE BUSINESS PENDULUM usually has swung for weeks, even months, in a new direction before the change is recognized. This experience probably will be duplicated this year.

James A. Farrell, president of the largest steel corporation in the world, declares emphatically that the turn came in this country last December.

There are increasingly abundant symptoms that the worst of the depression has passed and that recovery will shortly become sufficiently pronounced to be seen plainly by all.

We have now gone through all the processes essential to undoing inflation and establishing solid foundations for a fresh era of prosperity.

Among historic, familiar, dependable harbingers of sunshine in the business and financial world—and in employment—may be cited these:

Stock prices have gained an average of fifteen points since mid-December.

Domestic bonds have advanced appreciably.

Brokers' loans have decreased more than six billions from their 1929 peak.

Borrowings for commercial purposes have shown a significant increase.

Money for speculative purposes is daily available at one per cent; in New York, merchants' paper is discountable at 2¾ per cent, bills endorsed by bankers can be placed at 1¼ per cent, loans running up to ninety days are procurable at 1½ per cent—all phenomenally low terms, calculated to act as a potent business stimulant and as a powerful propellant of enterprise.

Underwriters, long timid, have resumed the issuing of new securities, with encouraging results. An addition of $600,000,000 to savings and $400,000,000 to thrift accounts during the last year, indicates that, despite widespread unemployment, our

POPE'S TALKS TO BE TRANSLATED

A special translation of the world-wide radio talk of Pope Pius XI will be furnished Boston Evening American readers in tomorrow's editions by Prof. Antonio Dentamaro, Ph. D., of the University of Rome, who is in Boston.

Prof. Dentamaro will listen to the broadcast in the offices of the Boston Evening American and immediately translate the Latin into English for immediate publication.

Boston Catholics and thousands of other creeds were preparing today for local reception of the talk.

While no special privileges were made by diocesan heads, every church unit where radios are available will be tuned in to catch the words from Vatican City.

Vienna, Feb. 11 (AP)—The secretary of the Czechoslovakian Legation, M. Zajicek, was shot and dangerously wounded in his office today by a 67-year-old former Czechoslovakian policeman named Boleslaus Zetka.

BALANCE AND RECEIPTS.

Washington, Feb. 11—Today's Treasury balance, $166,638,602.

United States customs receipts, $8,853,871.

STOCKS RISE IN BIG TRADING

New York, Feb. 11—Bullish operations were recorded on a large scale for the fourth consecutive session today in Wall Street.

By midday the volume of trading had swelled to the largest proportions of the new year. Profit-taking checked the advance in spots during the afternoon.

Static specialties such as J. I. Case and Columbian Carbon shot up about $9 a share. Chile Copper and Pittsburgh & West Virginia advanced $6 each.

Auburn dropped $10.50, then recovered. Rumors of a stock exchange inquiry tended to check the bullish demonstration in it.

Shares selling up $3 to $5 a share included American Telephone, American Water Works, Gillette, Westinghouse Electric, Johns Manville, American Can, Goodyear, Worthington, and American and foreign power. U. S. Steel sold up $2 a share.

The strength of the coppers checked the decline in the early trading.

Ruth Hanna Sued for Broken Contract

Washington, Feb. 11 (AP)—Informed of a $50,000 suit filed against her in Chicago by Caroli Gigliotta, Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick denied today she had broken a contract with the attorney.

"I know the man very well," the Illinois Congresswoman said. "But I have never violated a contract in my life, much less one with him."

FRESH BLOOD TO BE GIVEN 'YD DADDY' TOMORROW

Scores of Veterans Vie for the Chance to Save Life; First Test Strengthens Him

Harry G. Botsford, 583 Shirley st., Winthrop, was selected this afternoon for the second blood transfusion to Gen. Edwards. He served with the 101st Engineers in the World War.

A second blood transfusion to save the life of Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards will be performed tomorrow, it was announced today by Dr. Richard H. Miller.

Hundreds of Yankee Division veterans volunteered to give their blood today, and a dozen were examined, two being tentatively selected.

The general condition was better as a result of the first transfusion, performed yesterday, Dr. Miller said, but he was not optimistic about the eventual result of his patient's gallant fight.

"Gen. Edwards is out of immediate danger," the doctor announced when he left the sick room at Phillips House, Massachusetts General Hospital.

Asked about the chances of complete recovery, he said:

"Well, the general is 71 years old and a very sick man, but we have hopes of giving him a little more time in which to fight out his battle.

BLOOD FROM A FRIEND

"The first transfusion was very successful, and immediate improvement was noted."

Dr. Miller said that when Guy Watts of Philbrick st., Roslindale, former YD sergeant, who gave a pint of his blood yesterday, approached the general's bedside, the patient said:

"Oh, hello, I know you, lad."

"Sure you don," reiled Watts, saluting. "How are you, Daddy?"

"Oh, pretty good," said Gen. Edwards.

Drs. Miller and Robey will consult at the hospital tomorrow at 11 a. m., and after a candidate is definitely selected the general will receive another pint of fresh, strong blood from one of his former comrades in arms.

FATHER OF 3 TO AID

Those whose blood was found in today's examinations to be of the right quality and type desired for the second transfusion are Whitall Wright of Sanborn st., Winchester, and L. L. Penfield of headquarters

JUDGE FREES TWO MINISTERS HELD IN RED DEMONSTRATION

TEN OTHERS ARE FOUND GUILTY

Concord Pastor Testifies He Met the Rev. Bakeman "Quite by Accident"

Rev. Robert A. Bakeman, former mayor of Peabody, and Rev. Smith O. Dexter, pastor of Trinity Episcopal Church, Concord, were found not guilty in Municipal Court today on charges that grew from yesterday's Red demonstration on Boston Common, but ten others were found guilty.

They were charged in two counts with failure to obey the lawful commands of police, one by Capt. Jeremiah Gallivan and the other by Patrolman John Lynch.

Of the ten, six were fined and the cases of the others were placed on file after guilty findings.

Alec Druzinsky and Maurice Wolfman were fined $10 each for assault and battery on Sergt. Francis M. Tiernan and attempting to rescue a prisoner.

Abe Hurfield and Mark Lieberman were fined $5 each for making public addresses without a permit.

Belle Lewis and Anna Block, both of whom charged brutality against the police, were fined $5 each for displaying improper placards.

The latter at first refused to pay the fine and was placed in the dock after she said, "I don't have to pay a fine to a capitalistic court."

She changed her mind and was given time to pay, as were the others.

MET BY ACCIDENT

After lengthy testimony by police and the ministers, in which the latter denied any knowledge of a planned demonstration, Judge Good said he could not see that the two ministers were involved in any disorders.

Capt. Gallivan and Lynch said they ordered them to move on and were refused.

Rev. Dexter testified he had been to the Episcopal Diocesan House on Joy st., and was en route to the Harvard Club for luncheon when he "quite by accident" met the former Peabody mayor.

Even while the court cases were being called, the Trade Union Unity League, which sponsored yesterday's demonstration, announced that another, in the "interests of unemployed" would be held February 25.

Although Gov. Ely promised to do everything possible to help the unemployed after he heard the demands of a committee of three "Reds" who went to his office yesterday, the Trade Union Unity League last night characterized his handling of the issue as "evasive."

ORGANIZERS BUSY AGAIN.

Its statement announcing the meeting for February 25 demanded an answer from Governor Ely at that time. On this day the government must be forced to adopt a program of immediate cash relief, the statement said.

An echo of yesterday's demonstration was heard this morning at the Municipal Employment Bureau, 25 Church st., where two Communist organizers forced their way into a crowd of 200 work-seekers inside and began shouting that the office was too small.

Some 600 men were in the street outside waiting for a chance to get in, when the agitators began a loud-voiced harangue. Women fled from another section of the bureau and police were called to clear the place.

Red Cross Fund Now More Than $7,000,000

Washington, Feb. 11 (AP)—The Red Cross today passed the three-quarter mark in its campaign of $10,000,000 drouth relief fund.

Announcing the $7,511,222 total, Chairman Payne asked that chapters speed up their campaign for quotas so the fund might be closed soon. Rhode Island, with 84 per cent of the quota reached, was in advance of all other states.

mission moves in a mysterious way to regulate the railroads.

When Henry Ford was operating his railroad, since sold, he wanted to reduce freight rates. The commission wouldn't let him. Now the Louisville & Nashville Railroad asks permission to reduce passenger rates and the Interstate Commerce Commission says: "No, you mustn't do that."

In our queer country you have the government on the one hand waving the decrepit old Sherman act, forbidding combinations to reduce waste and produce profit.

On the other hand, you have the Interstate Commerce Commission forbidding a railroad to compete as it pleases and give the public cheaper service.

mountainous stock of savings has reached unprecedented heights.

The new year has already brought improvement in that essentially fundamental industry, iron and steel, always in the past regarded as among the most trustworthy of all economic yardsticks.

The year has already brought very substantial increases in the working forces of automobile manufacturers, who now feel distinctly hopeful that a broader demand is at hand.

Construction reports, although uneven, are at least a little more cheerful. A shrinkage of 35 per cent in the net operating income of our railroads is only one of many conclusive indications that the production and transportation of the necessaries and comforts of life have fallen far below the actual decrease in consumption and in wear and tear. Tire manufacturers have compiled authoritative statistics proving that during the last fifteen months "America has been running on its spare tire." Spare tires are not the only pre-panic surpluses which have since been almost completely used up.

The latest returns from utility companies show that a decrease in the consumption of electric power has run its course and that an upward trend is setting in.

Consumption of coal as well as consumption of gasoline tell a similar tale.

The outburst of commercial failures in January, entirely expected, is interpreted as marking the culmination of business troubles which invariably cross the tail end of a period of severe depression.

New York bankers notoriously have been the most pessimistic of any class in America. It was not until the last week of the year that they became convinced that their panicky apprehensions were not warranted. Since then they have become distinctly less fearful; indeed, most of them now feel confident that the storm has spent itself and that gradual betterment is assured.

Finance, always extremely sensitive, has worked itself into a mild fright over recent events in Congress. If it becomes certain that no special session will be held, the controllers of the most powerful purse strings in the land should, logically, express their relief by dropping some of their timidity and giving the country what it has sadly lacked for fifteen months, namely, some measure of intelligent, courageous leadership.

While admittedly recovery has not yet gone far, it is infinitely important and encouraging to have assurances that the country is at least now traveling in the right direction.

'STUDES' ADMIT GROTON PRANK

floor" of the room in Moors Hall, while he admitted his and Merriman's part in the affair.

Merriman, whose home is in Pelham Manor, N. Y., is the son of Prof. Roger B. Merriman of the history department at Harvard.

"We have nothing to hold back," said Jenkins as he paced up an ddown the room, lighting one cigarette from the stub of its predecessor.

"We did it and that's all there is to it."

Merriman, teetering on a suitcase, nodded assent, but Leonard, sunk in the depths of an armchair, did not raise his head. Where the demeanor of Jenkins and Merriman was gay and bubbling, that of Leonard was glumness itself.

LEONARD ABSOLVED

"We did it all right, but Leonard had nothing whatever to do with it," Jenkins continued. "Proof that the college believes that came today when the Spee Club bounced Merriman and me out, but retained Leonard as a member.

"It started out as a drunken prank, and the drunker we got, the worse it got.

"The prayer book was not destroyed. It is hidden in a box of papers in the press room at Groton School. Go ahead and publish that, and they will find it—right there where we say.

CROSS NOT DAMAGED

"The cross wasn't stolen. It wasn't even damaged. We threw it in some bushes, but it is now back again in the chapel. There was nothing stolen whatsoever.

"The coach's launch was not a total loss. We pounded it with a log but really didn't hurt it much. It is being repaired now and will be in use again soon."

Jenkins stopped his words temporarily to secure another package of cigarettes. Then he resumed his pacing.

"This had no connection with initiation in any new society. Rumors that the Med-Fac Society was being revived in this connection are all wet.

"Leonard is not connected with the case in any way at all. He went up there with us the first time, which was some time previous to the occasion, but he took no part in the pranks at all—an any way."

Jenkins lighted another cigarette.

KITTEN ON THE KEYS

"Here is a little news for you that hasn't been printed as yet. We parked a cat in an upright piano in the choir room and the d——a fool ran up and down and played tunes all night on the strings.

"Well, that's all there was to it. We're only too willing to pay for the damage we have done, whatever it may have been. So far the bill is $2500, taking in lawyers, detectives and the actual damage.

"While the university officials have done nothing as yet, they will do something next Tuesday—and that's a bet. It is inevitable that we will be expelled—kicked out."

Jenkins stopped and faced the reporter to whom he had been directing the narrative.

"Say, those were punk pictures of us you put in your paper. Send over a cameraman and get some good ones. Give us that break, anyway."

The cameraman was waiting, however, and he took several shots of the students—ex and present.

Jenkins picked up the telephone and called Dean A. C. Hanford. He asked the dean if he, Jenkins, would be allowed to play polo with the Harvard team Saturday night. Dean Hanford told him he would have to consider it and instructed Jenkins to call back later.

DEFENDS LEONARD

While Leonard was seated in the room of his pal, he was being defended at 126 Commonwealth ave by Mrs. Francis Gray, mother of Miss Edith M. Gray, member of the Vincent Club and Junior League, to whom Leonard is engaged.

"Mr. Leonard," said Mrs. Gray, "is not at all the type of boy that would be involved in vandalism of this kind. I am perfectly satisfied that he was not there.

"The vandalism at Groton is a very serious matter. Breaking into a church and destroying the sacred images is not something that can also considered as a college joke, and you may be sure that Mr. Leonard is not the type that would be involved in such an affair. I consider it a serious injustice to him.

The Spee Club, from which Jenkins and Merriman were dropped curtly without explanation, is one of Harvard's exanskiat organizations. In its ranks are many Groton men and it is believed that the Groton alumni, despite the fact that Jenkins and Merriman are also Groton alumni, decided to drop the funsters by way of rebuke.

BLAINE FLAYS BROWN AT P. O. HEARING

Senate Chairman Says Postmaster-General Is "Impertinent and Arrogant"

Washington, Feb. 11 (AP)—Postmaster General Brown refused today to furnish to the Senate postal lease investigating committee information which formed the basis of a report by him to President Hoover last summer.

He was being questioned in connection with the department's leasing policies.

Chairman Blaine said he wanted to question Brown on his "attitude on the production of certain records" in the department. The report last summer recommended purchase of a number of postal quarters now leased.

CLASH WITH BROWN

The postmaster-general said he wanted to aid the committee's inquiry in any way he could, but to furnish the department's records would be "incompatible with public interest."

The session early developed verbal clashes between Chairman Blaine and Brown.

Blaine called Brown "impertinent and arrogant," and the postmaster-general said this was no occasion for the committee chairman to lecture him.

COULD SAVE MONEY

The committee has $10,000 to make an appraisal of 50 of the buildings leased by the government. Blaine said it could save a great deal of time and money if the department would make available the information it had collected in connection with the report, and asked its submittal.

Brown explained many of the leases would soon expire and it would be necessary to purchase the buildings or renew the leases.

"It would embarrass our negotiations," he said. "If we disclosed what we believe the property was worth we would not be in as good position as if we did not disclose it."

LAST TRIBUTE PAID TO DUNLAP

Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman and former Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson today led hundreds of mourners at the funeral of Capt. Samuel Dunlap of the Brighton station.

A detail of 48 patrolmen under Capt. Louis E. Lutz preceded the cortege from the Dunlap home in Langley rd, Brighton, to Evergreen Cemetery where burial services took place.

A touching tribute was paid the late captain by 460 pupils and sisters of Our Lady of Presentation parochial school as they lined up at attention in front of the school. Services were held at St. Margaret's (Episcopal) Church, with Rev. Albert C. Larned, rector, officiating.

BITTER ENEMY NOW ON TRAIL OF CANNON

Dry Crusader Plans to Be Present When Congressional Probe Opens

Washington, Feb. 11 (INS)—Undismayed by the prospect of the Nye Senate campaign committee uncovering his expenditures in the Virginia anti-Smith campaign in 1928, involving $48,000, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., fiery Methodist Church South dry crusader, prepared to be present today when the committee begins its task.

It was the expenditure of this sum, in addition to $17,000 he received from E. C. Jameson, New York financier, which Cannon refused to account for to the Senate lobby committee in 1929.

GAVE CANNON $65,000.

Jameson testified before the lobby committee he gave Cannon $65,000 to be used in the Hoover campaign in the State. He gave the national Republican organization in Virginia an additional check for $250,000.

Cannon admitted the receipt of the $17,000—the committee produced a receipt signed by Cannon, but the bishop in effect told Sen. Caraway of Arkansas, chairman of the lobby committee, that it was none of the committee's business about the $48,000.

GLASS CALLED PROBE

Now comes the Nye committee, armed with authority of a Senate resolution, proposed by Sen. Glass of Virginia, bitter enemy of Cannon, with its investigation of the Cannon activities in the anti-Smith campaign.

Four Virginia banks in which Cannon is supposed to have or had accounts, one in Richmond, two in Blackstone, and one in Crewe, have been subpoenaed to present all records of the Cannon and anti-Smith Democrats' committee accounts.

company, 101st Field Artillery, 26th Division.

Wright is the father of three children and while overseas served with the 101st Field Artillery and the 104th Infantry.

"I'm not exactly a youngster, but if I can be of any help to 'Daddy' Edwards, believe me I will be happy," said Wright.

Others examined were Patrolman John A. Cullen, 40, of the superintendent's office at Boston police headquarters, who served under Gen. Edwards in the Panama Canal zone prior to the World War; David I. O'Connor, a Y. D veteran who was the general's chauffeur after the war and is now a Boston taxicab driver; and Patrolman McLean of Lagrange st. police division, also an ex-member of "New England's own" division.

Another was Sergt. Charles Edward of the 110th Cavalry, Massachusetts National Guard, stationed at the Commonwealth Armory.

MAJOR OFFERS BLOOD

Maj. James T. Duane of Framingham, who was wit the 101st Infantry, and was the second man elected as State commander of the American Legion, was a visitor at the hospital and offered his blood. He was not examined but may be called upon later.

Col. John W. Hyatt, who is in constant attendance upon the general, revealed that Cullen, O'Connor, Sergt. Edwards and McLean all offere dtheir blood when Gen. Edwards first went to the hospital on Jan. 16 for an operation to relieve an intestinal block.

"I've had so many offers during the last 24 hours from Yankee Division men that I've had to ask somebody at the YD Club to take charge and list them all," said Col. Hyatt. "It is wonderful, and the general thinks so, too.

RASKOB SEEKS SHOWDOWN

Washington, Feb. 11—A national Democratic rally has been called to meet in Washington on March 5, the day after Congress adjourns, to consider party problems and lay plans for 1932.

Members of the national committee and party leaders in and out of Congress are called. There will be Chairman Raskob said, a review of the financial situation. The party is approximately $630,000 in the "red." It owes Chairman Raskob personally some $225,000 and the County Trust Co. of New York some $400,000 more on notes which Chairman Raskob and his friends endorsed.

Southern prohibitionists charge that Chairman Raskob and his friends, are "trying to sell the party soul to the wets" in 1932 and that it is "unwise and indecent" for the party to be so beholden to any individual as it is to the national chairman because of his loans to it. Both these matters will be aired.

The criticism has rattled the Raskob leadership and it was decided to have a national meeting and a showdown.

A substantial majority of the party committeemen are believed behind Chairman Raskob.

POLICE 'ADONIS' SAYS WOMAN GONE 7 DAYS

Wandling, Heir in Will, Fears Mrs. Stella Held for Ransom

New York, Feb. 11 (AP)—The New York American today said in a copyrighted story that Mrs. Myrtle Stella, 36, widow of a wealthy real estate operator, had been missing from her West 58th st. home for seven days.

Her disappearance was reported to police, the paper said, by Patrolman George Wandling, known as "the Adonis of the police force." He advanced the theory that she had been kidnaped and was being held for an exorbitant ransom.

Wandling, representing himself as a close friend and principal heir of the widow, said the doorman at her apartment home told him she took a cab to Grand Central terminal on Feb. 4 and had not returned. A cousin, Mrs. S. G. Earl of Emerson, N. J., said she was not alarmed at the woman's absence.

The policeman was quoted by the American as saying Mrs. Stella altered her will last December to make him chief beneficiary after he had befriended her in the line of duty. He displayed a copy of a document purportedly saying he would receive the income for five years and then the principal, under certain conditions.

Wandling is the former husband of Frances Ingram, Metropolitan Opera star, whom he married in 1920, but who divorced him in 1924, and of Claire Suggs Wandling, Buffalo heiress.

This second marriage was annulled on her petition, after she was declared to have learned that the divorce which separated them was illegal and did not hold in New York State.

CRUELTY CHARGED

She declared in the divorce suit also that Wandling became cruel when she declined his demand for $25,000 to finance his ambitions toward becoming a movie star.

The second romance tarnished after only a few weeks of wedded life, and during the annulment proceedings Wandling charged that the former Claire Suggs had deceived him into believing her an heiress when she was only a telephone operator.

BONUS RELIEF NARROWED TO TWO PLANS

Washington, Feb. 11 (AP)—The House Ways and Means Committee today narrowed consideration of veterans' relief legislation to two proposals—one to increase loans and the other to pay one-fourth the face value of the certificates.

The committee is expected to approve one of the proposals tomorrow.

The loan plan is along the lines suggested by Representative Dickstein (D.), New Jersey, and would cost about $500,000,000. The one-fourth payment plan is sponsored by Representative Fish, (R.), New York.

Veterans Administrator Hines had estimated the Fish proposal would cost approximately $850,000,000.

The committee continued deliberation after voting down three veterans proposals.

Chairman Hawley announced the plan for immediate redemption in full of the certificates was eliminated by a 13 to 5 vote. This was the Brookhart-Patman proposal, involving an estimated outlay of $3,400,000,000.

The committee then voted down, 10 to 13, Hawley raid, the Garner plan for adjusted service pay plus 25 per cent, with 4 per cent compound interest added.

Gen. Hines estimated this would cost $2,106,000,000 if all veterans took it.

The committee voted down, 10 to 13, a modification of the Garner plan.

Hawley said details of the loan plan were being worked out, to be presented tomorrow. Representatives of the treasury and Gen. Hines, he said, would be present "to give us advice on the two proposals."

New York, Feb. 11 (AP)—Opposition to any veterans' legislation which would require issuance of bonds in considerable amounts was expressed today by Undersecretary Mills of the Treasury at a luncheon of the Bond Club here. The proposition of paying the face value of the certificates now he termed indefensible. He predicted a deficit of not less than half a billion dollars at the end of the fiscal year.

SHE WOOED HIM AND HOW! HE TELLS COURT

Los Angeles, Feb. 11 (AP)—This is Robert Cecil Wygent's official version of what Elsie E. Greene did when she got "that way about him."

They were introduced on the beach at San Diego by a mutual friend and all three went bathing. Scarcely had they entered the water when Miss Greene threw her arms about Wygent's neck and began kissing him. And she just wouldn't stop.

Wygent became greatly frightened and his friend, Crossley Moore, came to his aid.

Wygent fled to his automobile and drove home. But Miss Greene pursued him. He left his ranch near San Diego and came to Los Angeles, seeking a job as deputy city prosecutor. Miss Greene intercepted him and threatened to accompany him to the prosecutor's office and spoil his chances of getting the job.

They compromised by going to the marriage license bureau. They filed an application of intention to wed. Wygent got the deputy prosecutor's job. Then he discovered Miss Greene had other boy friends and decided she could marry one of them. He took the intention-to-wed document home.

Still optimistic, Miss Greene crawled through a transom of his apartment, found the document, took it back to the City Hall and obtained a marriage license naming Wygent as the party of the second part.

Wygent was firm.

But Miss Greene went to see him in his office at the City Hall and three times Wygent had to summon help to remove her. Four times he required assistance to get her out of his automobile.

Miss Greene finally became slightly discouraged and sued him for $50,000, alleging breach of promise. Wygent told his story in filing an answer to the suit. He also asked an injunction restraining Miss Greene from wooing him any more.

The Throat Line Beauty Is Smooth

By ANN ARDEN

DID YOU ever read of a fairy princess who did not have a throat like that of a swan's? Neither did we. The description always calls to mind three distinct qualities—whiteness, smoothness and slimness. And these are the three beauty points upon which modern throats are judged.

NECKLINES will be higher for spring—thus runs the latest fashion report. And the higher necklines creep about the throat, the more that throat will be brought into the spotlight. Scraggly looking skin, double chins, taut muscles, dry wrinkled skin—and unending list of neck liabilities which will detract from the loveliest of faces, shadow the neckline of the smartest frock. You can sidestep them all if you will but follow a few tried treatments.

A LONG THROAT is something which you either do or do not fall heir to at birth. If you do, you are fortunate.

SMOOTH, white skin on the neck must be maintained through the constant use of creams and stimulants regardless of age. Bleaches keep that lily whiteness. Patting with the hand, with pads dipped in a stimulating tonic, rhythmic massage by means of an ingenious electric patter, light and easily handled, all help to reduce that disturbing roll at the back of the neck, as well as flabbiness about the chin.

TO FIRM and tone the skin, and help the circulation, the concentrated ice-pack pictured is a boon. The medicated ice is tightly encased in the oval aluminum top, and the handle is a composition available in pastel tones to match your boudoir fittings. It is light, easy to use, and gives the effect achieved by ice, minus its moisture, and other disadvantages.

NOTHING reveals fatigue quits so quickly as the eyes. In this social season when every evening brings late hours and less rest, it is helpful to know some simple treatment that will aid the beauty as well as the rested feeling when one's eyes are tired, or inflamed from sharp winds, or long hours of close application.

* * *

THE "BEAUTY EYE REST" pictured is carefully cut, may be obtained, in pink or black—the better to exclude light while resting—and contains a medicated pack for each eye. The little packs may be buttoned to the band and renewed at will.

Old Harvard Tradition Broken

Senior Spread at Commencement Exercises to Be Held at Lowell House

Another old Harvard custom was broken yesterday, when students named Lowell House as the scene for the senior spread at the coming Commencement exercises.

For 20 years and more the Harvard senior spread, the gala social event of the four years of college life, has been held at Memorial Hall and in the delta immediately to the front of the old monument to victims of wars previous to the World clash.

SHUT OFF FROM STREET

John N. Trainer, Jr., who will have charge of the senior spread, announced that the committee found the old place less suited to the occasion than the house unit quadrangles, which will shut the affair off from the streets.

In holding the affair at Memorial Hall it was necessary to build a hedge of pine trees about the delta and place a canvas around the borders in order to exclude the traffic on Cambridge st. and Broadway.

PERMISSION OBTAINED

Permission was obtained by the committee from Julian L. Coolidge, master of Lowell House, to use the new unit and, according to the plans, the dance will be held in the dining hall, while the quadrangles will be illuminated and tables set there for the spread.

The committee expects to set a precedent for a rotating schedule for the spreads of future years, with the scene of activity changing annually from one house unit to the next, in order that each house may be used.

"ATTRACTIVE, WELL BRED, BUT SO CARELESS ABOUT HER HANDS"

"They were mean to say it, but I knew they were right"

"I was ashamed of my hands, but I had hoped no one else noticed them. Then I chanced to overhear that comment. From the woman I admired most in our club, too. 'Careless,' she had called me.

"Then I realized how my red, roughened hands spoiled the effect I wanted to make. But how to have pretty hands—with DISHES to do three times a day?

"It was a little friend of mine who works in a beauty shop, who helped me out.

"'We use LUX suds in our manicure bowls,' she told me—'because they leave the hands very soft and lovely. If I were washing dishes I'd use Lux in the DISHPAN—get a beauty treatment every time I did the dishes!'

"Now my hands are as WHITE and SMOOTH as before I was married! I never saw such a magical improvement. I'm proud of them now, thanks to LUX."

Wives Everywhere

So many wives are now using Lux in the dishpan! They find this simple beauty precaution keeps their hands lovely as though they had maids. In fact, 305 famous beauty shops say:

"With all our experience, we can't tell the difference between the hands of the wife who uses Lux in the dishpan and the hands of the woman with servants to do all her work."

Best of all, this care for which your hands are so grateful costs almost nothing. Lux for all your dishes costs LESS THAN 1¢ A DAY!

N. Y. TO BERLIN IN 12 HOURS, 10 MILES UP

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
Universal Service Special Cable

Copyright, 1931, Universal Service, Inc.

Berlin, Feb. 11—Berlin to New York by air in 12 hours. That is the goal of Herr Asmus Hansen German inventor and altitude flyer, and a member of the German Institute for Experimental Aeronautics.

Herr Hansen is the designer of the world's first "Stratosphere plane," now nearing completion at the Junkers works at Dessau. This mystery machine is being built secretly for a society of German scientists.

Herr Hansen declared:

"Speed and safety are the two most important factors in that problem. Air transport of today takes place chiefly in the 'surf zone of the other ocean.' In this turbulent zone, aircraft are exposed to all the treachery of the weather. Rainclouds reach as high as 19,000 feet; thunderstorms up to 26,000 feet.

"This weather zone ends between 36,000 and 44,000 feet. Above that, we get into the stratosphere, or quiet region; without clouds, 'weather', fogs, squalls—completely free from all disturbances for planes that can fly there."

Stubborn Coughs Ended by Recipe, Mixed at Home

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up a stubborn, lingering cough. It takes but a moment to prepare and costs little, but it gives real relief even for those dreaded coughs that follow severe cold epidemics.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and tastes so good that even children like it.

Not only does this simple mixture soothe and heal the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease, but also it is absorbed into the blood, and acts directly upon the bronchial tubes, thus aiding the whole system in throwing off the cough. It loosens the germladen phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in case of distressing coughs, chest colds, and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Doff Your Hat In Silent Tribute to These Men!

Let us pause for a moment and pay a silent tribute to the big strong men who are doing the work of St. Bernard dogs all along the American shore line. The camera tells a story, of courage, and more! Consider the patience it takes to train these men to fetch the little keg of brandy to sufferers who are jumping up and down with impatience on the fringe of the great American desert. And yet there are scoffers who say the Eighteenth Amendment does not bring out the best traits of the nation's manhood. Bah!

First Thing to Do for a Cold

Open the bowels, drink plenty of water and relieve any congestion in head or chest by the use of Albatum. Albatum is a new-type preparation that works two ways at once. It acts locally on the affected parts and at the same time releases penetrating vapors which you breathe. You get a twofold effect of vital importance in relieving congestion and in stopping a cold. Anything less is half-way measures. In case of chest colds, apply Albatum to both chest and back and to nostrils. In case of head colds or stuffed nose apply only to nostrils. In quick time circulation is restored and cold relieved without any unpleasant after-effects. Albatum, unlike other preparations, is clean to use—does not stain clothing. All McKesson Service Druggists and other independent drug stores sell Albatum. Note the name. A McKesson & Robbins product.

Death of Lynn Woman, 92, Reveals Dire Poverty

A situation of want and suffering characterized by Joseph Cole, secretary of the Lynn Welfare Department, as one of the worst he had ever encountered, was revealed by a death in Lynn.

Mrs. Louise Lavelle, 92, died of pneumonia while her son and daughter, both advanced in years, attempted to give what aid they could although they themselves were afflicted with grippe.

Sec. Cole received word of the trio's predicament only the day before the elderly woman died. He went to the little cottage at 8 Spruce st., the only possession of the family, and without waiting for the usual formalities he went to a store across the street and obtained groceries and other necessities. Fuel was sent to the house.

Sec. Cole said that the three had been receiving medical attention from a Lynn doctor who also supplied necessary medicine. Mrs. Celina Bellmore, a widow of six months, and daughter of the woman, was today dangerously ill and was being attended by her brother, Eugene J. Lavelle 59 Lavelle's own condition was poor.

POLICE SAVE 2 IN BLAZE

A 65-year-old widow and a special police officer were rescued by police when fire of unknown origin broke out in the cottage at 28 Essex ave., Swampscott, early today.

The widow, Mrs. Annie McCoy, and housekeeper for Special Officer John H. Bryson, was overcome by smoke and was carried out by Patrolmen Joseph Ryan and Arthur Hannon of the Metropolitan District police.

FANNING
With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Now for Rush of Great Unsigned. Barrow Has Babe

On First Base and Fans Giggle. Bow Wow Derby.

PERFORMING PACHYDERMS OBSTRUCT TRAFFIC

THIS IS THE TIME o' the year when the alarm clocks awake the Great Unsigned. When the baseball mamas start taking paps's ice cream pants and other Florida regalia out of the camphor and packing his war bag for the annual trek South, there always is a grand rush to sign them papers. Braving writer's cramp, Mr. Hold Out steps right up and scrawls his John Hancock to the contract and all is quiet along the Potomac.

LOU GEHRIG

There are not so many of the Great Unsigned this year as usual. About the only local star who hasn't sent in his contract is Wally Berger. While Wally hasn't signed, he says he will in due time. The great Lou Gehrig and Herb Pennock of the Yankees, Bill Terry of the Giants and Dazz Vance and Babe Herman of the Dodgers still remain outside of the fold.

A BIG HULLABALLOO is being made over Henri Louis Gehrig. Whether there is any fire behind the smoke belched forth by Cousin Egbert Barrow, business manager of the Yankees, we don't know. Egbert always was a roaring, blustering blade. He's the fellow who socked one of the best-loved sport scribes in America, who only had been out of the hospital three days, on the jaw, and thereby caused Jake Ruppert to create a job of Public Relations Council for George Perry Anyway, Barrow throws out his chest and belches:

"Huh! What do we care whether Gehrig signs! The baseball woods is full of good first baseman. We could have had Eddie Morgan of the Indians for the asking. We didn't want him. If Gehrig doesn't want to play first base, why McCarthy can pull Babe Ruth in from the outfield and Babe will make the fans forget there ever was such a fellow as Gehrig."

THAT'S THE DALOGNEY. Barrow is throwing the cow's husband all over the pampas. Lou Gehrig is too handy a fellow to have around to talk of anyone else guarding the getaway hassock. And 37-year-old Babe isn't going to do much cavorting around the infield. Babe's homers are too badly needed to bring him in from the outfield at this stage of his career.

What are the odds Gehrig isn't signed this week?

THE FRENCH CONSUL in New York has come to the aid of Paul Keller and Sera Martin and the two French fliers now are assured of their accustomed vin blanc and vin rouge. If M'sieu Keller takes enough swigs of Chateau Yquem he may carry the silks of La Belle France to victory over our Yankee fliers in the B. A. A. games here on Saturday.

When news came over the wire that the punching Pole, Justin Sirius, had knocked out Matt Flanagan, Tim "Haddock" Sullivan wept such salty tears that the water around the Fish Pier arose seven inches. Ochone! Ochone! Ireland isn't Ireland any more!

THE THRILL OF THE NORTH and some of the flavor of the old days is given in the annual New England Sled Dog Derby, which will be decided tomorrow, Friday and Saturday over the blue hills of New Hampshire—now white with snow—around Laconia. From all over the great North Country, across the border into Canada and west to The Pas, in Manitoba, have gathered the greatest of the drivers and the best of their teams.

EMILE ST. GODARD

They'll come mushing into Laconia as they did into Nome and Dawson and Circle City in the days of the great Klondike gold rush. Gathered around the finish line will be a few of the old sourdoughs who remember Alaska and the North in the days with the bark on. Boston, the old Bay State, had no small quota in that daring band that mushed north into the Arctic when the cry, "Gold! Gold!" came echoing down over the barrens.

EMILE ST. GODARD, from The Pas, Manitoba, twice winner of the Ottawa classic and three times winner of the Eastern International at Quebec and his great rival, Shorty Ruzicki, will be on scratch. The duel between these two famous mushers should be a thriller.

A new pair of shoes designed for strange board floor running killed Keller's chances of winning in his American debut at Newark last Monday. The Frenchman, finishing fourth, tore off his shoe and showed one torn nail and two badly lacerated toes.

Frank Weiner, chairman of the Pennsylvania Boxing Commission, now wants all boxing titles abolished. Philly fans want Weiner abolished.

THERE ARE 3,200,000 bricks in the 2½-mile Indianapolis Speedway, over which the annual International 500-Mile Auto Race will be held in May. The track was built in 1910 and builders claim not a brick will have to be touched to put the track in shape for the big May classic.

THOSE NUMEROUS traffic jams on Washington st. this morning were caused by the wrestlers. The performing pachyderms are cluttering up the town. One scarcely can move without bumping into a fellow with a beam like the Leviathan and a paunch like an alderman. The war between the wrestling twins brings two whole herds of human hippos into the Hub to entertain in wrestling shows tomorrow and Friday.

JIM LONDOS

Tomorrow night at the Arena Paul Bowser puts on a cotkling show in aid of the sick widow of the late George Tuohey, Boston's pioneer wrestling impresario. It is headed by a Nick Lutze vs Lee Wykoff bout. Joe Stecher, former world's champion, will take on George Vassell in the semi-winder.

JIM LONDOS, who is hailed as champion in New York, the same as Ed George is acclaimed world's champion here and elsewhere, will make his Boston Garden debut on Friday night with Rudy Duseck in the opposite corner.

London says he got his greatest thrill when he appeared before 50,000 persons in the Athens stadium, which was built on the site of the arena in which the ancient Olympic Games were held. Jim didn't get a single, solitary drachma for his efforts. The show was staged in aid of a fund to pay for building gymnasiums throughout Greece.

We recall that Athens stadium vividly. It is built on the banks of the Illyses river under the shadow of the Hill of Ardettos. The arena contains a section of wall said to be a part of the original stadium built many years before Christ. There was a scar on it purported to have been made by an ancient Grecian discus thrower. The circle from which the Olympic contestants of 1906 reaied the discus was on the site of the same mark from which the ancient discus throwers used to scale the specer.

MARTIN SHERIDAN didn't hit the scar made by the ancient champion. Marvelous Martin scaled the saucer right over the wall and into the river!

This is the night the Winter Leaguers dine Shone Collins at the Hotel Essex. The new Red Sox manager's friends want to give him a rousing sendoff. Tickets at the Essex, or from John J. Dooley, 60 Congress st. Everyone invited.

NOW CHICAGO is awarded the Olympic boxing tryouts. What's the matter with our local A. A. U. officials? The Hub certainly should get some of the plums.

Dodgers Now Own 4 Mound Methusalehs

With the signing of John Picus, son of Pa and Ma Picus of Hazelton, Pa., the Brooklyn Dodgers now boast four of the five oldest pitchers in captivity. Picus is otherwise and better known as Jack Quinn.

Quinn is 48 years old. Adolph Luque is 43, Thurston 38 and Dazzy Vance nearing 40.

Before the fans accuse Uncle Wilbert Robinson of turning Brooklyn into an old man's home, consider what Uncle Robbie's Methusalehs did for Brooklyn last year. Luque was one of the league's leading flingers. Thurston came out of nowhere to put the Dodgers into the race. Vance—well, Boston fans certainly know what a heaver Vance is.

Quinn has a spitter utterly different than the one used by Grimes, Mitchell and other National League heavers. National League batters are now going to have their troubles with Quinn's old-fashioned, pre-war, slippery elm ball.

When Uncle Robbie was asked on the 'phone if he was going to sign Grover Cleveland Alexander, his reply sounded something like "Go to Helena—Montana!"

Harvard Spares—Wood, R. Saltonstall, Baldwin, Martin, Palmer, Fell, Putnam, W. Everett, Frothingham, Wolcott.

University Club Spares—Stubbs, Hilliard, W. Saltonstall, Bigelow, Holland, Adams, Newell, Clark.

Face Off at 8:15 o'clock.

Skating after their tenth straight victory, the Harvard Six faces University Club at the Arena tonight.

Twice before, Harvard downed the Grads by close scores. Tonight, however, the odds favor University Club. Harvard has been out of the runners for almost a month, and to add to their difficulties, they will not have the advantage of playing on home ice.

Coach Joe Stubbs of Harvard will rely on his regular combination. The Crimson forward line will have Everett, Garrison and Cunningham alternating with Wood, Saltonstall and Baldwin.

Batchelder, Palmer and Crosby constitute the Harvard defense crop for tonight's battle, while Captain Hardy Ellis will tend the draperies.

The greatest aggregation of ex-college players in the country will represent University Club in their third attempt against Harvard. Ding Palmer, former Yale star, Johnny Chase, ex-Harvard captain, and Paul Curtis, will be the forward three.

Two former Boston College stars, Ed Mullowney and Joe Fitzgerald, are slated to start at defense for University Club, while Ted Learned, of Dartmouth, is picked to tend goal.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

From slugging and lunging with the golf club to free swinging with smoothness and rhythm is a big jump and there are plenty of golfers who have used up a good many years trying to negotiate it, but my effort in these lessons has been to the end of helping you make this progress directly and all at once. The swinging action we have been studying is not half so difficult to master or get along with as the ordinary slugging, baseball variety of batting that so many of you wrongly follow. Much of it is in keeping your hands at their address-position height from the ground at the moment of impact with the ball, and the best practice for that is to make easy shots with a mashie or some other pitching iron.

If You Don't Know

The Giants are refusing Bill Terry the salary he demands because he didn't knock in many runs last season despite his .401 batting average. . . . Lou Hayman, forward on the Syracuse University basketball team, has averaged 14 points a game this season. . . . Of the entire fields in the recent Los Angeles and Agua Caliente opens, only Leo Diegel and MacDonald Smith did not use any steel-shafted clubs. . . . Ray Miller, new Navy coach, was signed as line coach by Syracuse in 1925, but sent his Notre Dame roommate, Joe Balch, to take the job. . . . Johnny Zinn, who won 28 games for San Francisco last season, has had his salary cut $500. . . . "General" Crowder, Washington pitching ace, was bought out of the army by the San Francisco club several years ago. . . . And "Shoco" Collins bought Bill Cissell out of the army in Des Moines for $75, sold him for $13,000 to Portland, which, in turn, sold him to the White Sox for $110,000. . . . Big league scouts should spend more time around army camps. . . . The first mutuel betting machines in America were installed at Churchill Downs by Johnnie Keegan, present general superintendent at Hialeah Park, Miami.

HARVARD MAY PLAY TIGERS

Harvard and Princeton's athletic differences seem settled at last, and Princeton today awaited Harvard's reply to an invitation to bury the hatchet and talk schedules.

Dr. Charles W. Kennedy, athletic director of Princeton, wired William J. Bingham, director of Harvard athletics, asking the Crimson sport chief to name an early date when the two will confer.

The meeting of the two directors is expected to take place before the end of the week. They will discuss the possibility of Harvard and Princeton meeting in a hockey game during the present season.

Arranging dates and schedules will be a simple matter, for both universities have been expecting the peace treaty for many weeks. Open dates in almost every branch of winter and spring sports will be filled as quickly as possible.

Sonnenberg Suffers Serious Trouble With His Eye

By JACK CONWAY

Gus Sonnenberg, former world's heavyweight wrestling champion, today had three ulcers on his right eye cauterized. This precaution was taken to prevent any possibility of the wounds becoming septic.

It was not possible to apply even a local anesthetic. Sonnenberg stated that the treatment caused him intense pain, but that he realized it was necessary.

Jack Conway

Gus has been equipped with heavy smoked glasses to keep the light out of his optics.

Sonnenberg told this writer it will probably be six weeks before he is able to return to the mat. He has called off eight matches in various parts of the country.

"It was a tough blow for me to meet with a mishap at this time," said Gus, "as I have plenty of opportunities to show. Then, you know, I'm planning to get married, and they do say money, as well as love, is required to keep the matrimonial wheel grinding."

Sonnenberg has been the most colorful figure in the wrestling world. The tremendous popularity wrestling is enjoying in all parts of the country is due to the color Sonny injected into the sport with his famous flying tackle.

Many former college stars have followed Bonny into the mat game. This has resulted in a new element patronizing the sport.

Ten years ago wrestling was a game supported almost entirely by the foreign groups. Today it has the backing of many former college men.

Mrs. Ada Tuohey Gets Aid From Wrestlers

It is pleasing to note that Mrs. Ada Tuohey, widow of the late George V. Tuohey, will benefit from the wrestling show which Paul Bowser will stage at the Arena tomorrow night. Part of the gross receipts will go to Mrs. Tuohey as well as personal donations from Bowser and every wrestler who will appear on the card.

Lee Wykoff, former University of St. Louis star, will clash with the rugged Nick Lutze of California in the final bout, which will be best two out of three falls to a finish. Lutze has beaten Pat McGill and Jack Sherry in Boston bouts, and looks like one of the best of the younger crop of grapplers.

Wykoff has also been on Victory Trail and appears headed for the heights in the mat game.

Joe Stecher, former world's champion, and George Vassell, giant Greek from Chicago, will get tangled up in another finish mat.

Count Zarynoff will be paired with Oscar Nygren of Sweden. Bibber Roy will oppose Rex Smith of Northern Michigan, Kevepie Kilroy will tackle Al Thomas, Otto Huttanen of Finland will clash with John Grandovich of New York, while Tony Catalana of Chicago will mingle with Nick Skotos of Greece.

Londos is Favorite for Dusek Bout

Jim Londos, Greek heavyweight, has been installed a favorite for his one fall to a finish match with Rudy Dusek of Little Rock, Ark., which will be held at the Boston Garden on Friday night under the direction of Ray Fabiani. Londos has played to two capacity crowds in the New York Garden during the past six weeks.

Dusek has won four straight bouts at the Boston Garden, and is confident he will make things interesting for his Greek rival.

JOE McKENNEY NEW BASEBALL COACH AT B. C.

GRID MENTOR SUCCEEDS DUFFY

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Joseph McKenney of Brighton, head coach of football at the Heights, will be the next baseball coach at Boston College.

This was learned today from authoritative sources and probably will be announced after the meeting of the Boston College advisory board on athletics at the Hotel Kenmore tonight.

McKenney will succeed Hughie Duffy, Red Sox scout, and will be tendered a one-year contract. The appointment of McKenney is another step by Boston College toward the goal of graduate coaches for all sports. Boston College first employed a graduate coach in 1927 when Leo Daley was signed as football mentor.

After a successful season, Daley resigned his position to resume teaching at Boston English high where he also coaches and teaches at the present time.

Following Daley's resignation, the graduate board hired Joe McKenney. In his first year as head coach, McKenney turned out an undefeated team. The next year, the Eagle eleven lost a 7 to 6 contest to Fordham, while Marquette won, 26 to 6, and Villanova managed to tie the B. C. team.

Last season, owing to injuries to many of the Eagle stars, McKenney's team did not look so well on paper, although he should have won every game had he the least bit of luck.

Joe McKenney first captured the eye of sport followers when a student at Brighton High School where he was a three letter athlete, his favorite sports being hockey, baseball and football. While at Brighton, he was selected by the schoolboy writers as one of the best athletes in school ranks.

On being graduated from Brighton, Joe McKenney went to Boston College for four years. He was a star from the first day he was there until he got his degree.

Cavanaugh Rated Joe Among the Best

McKenney captained the eleven in his last year. Major Cavanaugh said of him: "McKenney is the greatest football player I have ever coached. He is brilliant on the offense, a better head than any of the stars of the football world."

Besides playing football at Boston College, McKenney played baseball under the coaching of Jack Slattery. His pitching arm was ruined through his success in football where he met with an injury. However, Slattery used him in the outer garden and as pinch hitter.

New Job for McKenney

JOE McKENNEY, head grid coach at Boston College, who has been appointed baseball coach at the Heights to succeed Hugh Duffy, who was pilot at the Heights for the past three years.

Student Support Sagging, Boston University May Drop Football

DEAN BEGG MAKES THREAT TO ABOLISH GAME IN 1932

Unless student interest increases next fall, Boston University will abolish football in 1932 according to an article which appears in the current issue of the Boston University News, the students' official undergraduate publication.

Dean Alexander S. Begg, chairman of the athletic council, said:

"I can see a great deal of good in football for both the spectators and the players alike. Yet, to continue something that is not wanted would be a mistake.

"We are spending the students' money," the B. U. dean continued, "and we must be careful with it. We cannot spend money upon something that the students themselves do not seemingly want."

Dean Begg has arrived at these conclusions after two years' study. He is a keen sport follower and will act for the best interests of the university.

Boston University is the fifth largest school in the United States. It has a student enrollment of almost 15,000. The entire student body is admitted to the games free of charge and yet, outside of the opening game last fall, there has never been more than 2500 students at a game. At the Springfield game there were only 100 students.

Dartmouth, Holy Cross and Army will not be played next year. The only opponent out of the Terrier's class next fall will be Boston College.

To meet this new schedule, the coaches have a veteran team returning. Only five men from the entire squad have been lost and their places can easily be refilled.

Jones May Play Here in Charity Match

Bobby Jones will visit a Boston course this season and plans are being made to have him play against Francis Ouimet in a charity exhibition match.

Chances are that the Massachusetts Golf Association will stand in back of the charity match, while not actually arranging the details. Several big charities are represented as being eager to stage the contest, and there's not a course in Greater Boston that would not be glad to entertain the two old friends and great golfers.

The Atlanta barrister has made it plain that he is willing to appear in certain charity affairs on the links this season. He always was partial to Boston and he and Ouimet have been close and cordial friends for many years.

Campolo Sails to Meet Loughran

Buenos Aires, Feb. 11 (AP)—Vittorio Campolo, towering Argentine fighter, announced today he would sail February 27 for the United States to meet Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia heavyweight, in Madison Square Garden, New York, April 3.

Jones in Two Charity Matches on Coast

Los Angeles, Feb. 11 (AP)—The club-swinging talents of Robert Tyre Jones may be called on for charity following his arrival in Hollywood this spring to fulfill a motion picture contract. George Marshall, film director, who will have charge of the Jones golf series, said today Jones probably would play two charity matches here.

No details of the proposed matches were available, although it was suggested Jones might meet George Von Elm, Los Angeles professional and a former amateur champion.

Stage Ring Bouts for Millionaires Only

Miami, Fla., Feb. 11 (AP)—Shades of John L. Sullivan, whose speech was as ferocious as his looks and who pounded his way to pugilistic glory with bare fists in Midwest cornfields in defiance of law and order.

A boxing bout was staged last night in the open air patio that was exclusive to millionaires, their debutante daughters and grand dame aunts.

It was the first fight ever put on by a society club, and members and guests sat at tables around the ring to watch Johnny Nebo of Key West defeat Ike Merritt of Lakeworth in ten rounds.

The club orchestra played between rounds to the accompaniment of stirring tea. "Hot dogs" were served.

Lomski in Draw

HARRIS IS SENT TO TIGERS

Henry "Smoky" Harris, a forward and defense player of the Boston Bruins, has been sent to the Tigers, farm team of the Bruins in the Can-Am League. Harris will play with the Tigers tonight against Providence tonight in a game at Providence.

The Bruins bought Harris last winter. He is 25 years old, a left hand shot, and a good hockey player. The addition of Harris to the Tigers' roster may help that team considerably for the remainder of the season.

Keller to Run 1000 in B. A. A. Meet

New York, Feb. 11 (AP)—Paul Keller, French middle distance runner, has picked the 1000-yard event at the Boston A. A. games Saturday for his second race in America. He notified Dan Ferris, secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union, yesterday that he would prefer the 1000 to the Hunter mile, for which he also was entered.

Keller does not believe the injury he suffered to a toe Monday will hamper his running seriously, but both he and Sera Martin, partner in the French track invasion, bought larger running shoes yesterday.

Rep. Fish Requests Answer From "Point"

Washington, Feb. 11 (AP)—General Douglas MacArthur, Army chief of staff, was asked today what action the War Department had taken toward inquiring into the charges of the Providence, R. I., Evening Bulletin, that efforts had been made to induce a star Rhode Island State College football player to enter West Point.

Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, in a letter today reminded MacArthur he had urged action relative to charges that Cadet Paul T. Carroll and W. T. Wrightson, a member of the Army Athletic Association, had sought an appointment for Kenneth Goff, gridiron star.

Pres. Hickey Abandons Trip

Chicago, Feb. 11 (AP)—Because of his wife's illness, President Thomas J. Hickey of the American Association may be forced to abandon his annual trip to the league's spring baseball training camps.

No 'Queen' for 1932 Olympic Games

Los Angeles, Feb. 11 (US) — Los Angeles has decided that there will be no tricks done with mirrors during the Olympic Games to be held here next year. Which is another way of saying that the usual "queen" racket will not even be considered. Nor will there be an official hostess.

"Olympic procedure and the international properties involved and the courtesies due the countries participating in the games, prohibit even the ceremonial type of queen or other fictitious ruling head," the committee stated.

School Notes

By BILL CONNELL

Hyde Park, Jamaica Plain and East Boston high school track teams clash in a triangular meeting at the East Armory today. The meet is the ninth held among the three schools.

Skip Sherlock has several outstanding senior division performers. Capt. Joe Gray of Hyde Park in the 300 can do 36 seconds. Ed Donlan in the 600 is one of the best in the Boston schools. Courtney Rankin and Phelps are good in the dashes. Lloyd Sanborn, tall Hyde Park 1000-yard runner, should be a first place winner.

Liddell of Jamaica Plain in the 1000, and Haskell of East Boston in the senior hurdles, are a couple of fine performers, who will give the Hyde Park entries stiff competition.

Adolf Bondarek of Hyde Park, little junior hurdler, is better than last year though he seems not to have grown at all. He is a natural hurdler and in his division is one of the finest timber toppers of Boston schools.

Haverhill high school has one of the few unbeaten court teams in the state and if it continues its fine play will go into the Tech tourney a heavy favorite. A veteran team which has speed and skill, Haverhill entertains a tough opponent today in Lowell high, but the Haverhill boys are likely to stress through to a win over their old rivals.

JOHN N. RYAN, M.D.

New York City.

Dear Sirs:

I want the cigar smoking public to be made conscious of the danger to health involved in any unsanitary methods of manufacture. "Spit-tipping" is disgusting and unhealthy. It will go when the public realizes it exists, and it is such a campaign as yours which will bring the public to this realization.

I commend your campaign heartily and wish you well. I have no objection to your publication of this letter, over my signature, if it will help in the good work.

Very Truly Yours,
John N. Ryan

BRUINS WIN HARD TILT

LOCALS BAG HAWKS BY 2 TO 1

By BILL GRIMES

Judging from the exhibitions they have given here, the Chicago Blackhawks, whom the Bruins defeated, 2 to 1, in a rough game at the Garden, are destined to be an unpopular road team.

Years ago, the knock down and drag out brand of hockey lost its popularity. The present day fan leans towards the clean, scientific clubs. They do enjoy legitimate body checks but they are quick to censure the charging high stick carriers, such as the Blackhawks.

Individually, the Chicago Blackhawks are a clever, fast, thrilling bunch. But collectively, they play the wrong kind of hockey. They went after the Bruins from the start of last night's tilt and knocked the Rossmen around at random.

It was not so much the fact that the Bruins were the victims of some heavy checking as it was the fact that their bodying was accompanied by deliberate charging and in most cases, passed without notice by the officials. The Hawks displayed too much tendency toward high sticking, which is one of the most dangerous infractions of the rules and should be severly dealt with at all times.

Penalties Play Important Part in Bruins Win

Penalties played an important part in the winning and losing of last night's game. The Bruins scored their first goal while "Mush" March was in the box for a boarding check. Then, the Hawks' took up the game in the second period, while Eddie Shore was in exile. The final and winning tally, which George Owen whaled home in the third chapter, came while the Chicago outfit was a man shy.

Either the Blackhawks were out to get the Bruins, or they felt that they could get the Rossmen sufficiently peeved to make them retaliate and draw penalties.

During their first two seasons in the N. H. L., the Bruins would have gone on the warpath against the antics of hockey the Hawks tossed at them last night. In fact, they probably would have started the rumpus themselves and thereby beaten Chicago to the punch.

But they learned their lesson, and today there are few clubs in the game playing a cleaner brand of hockey than the Bruins. And, it goes without saying that there are few more successful clubs.

Hawks Are Due for League Opposition

The Hawks will do considerable damage to opponents during a season, but the time is not far off when they will discover that the other clubs are capable of playing the same game. They will also discover that every club in the league will be gunning for them and there never was a hockey team that could beat up an entire league.

Until such a time as the Hawks steady down and give their undivided attention to playing within the rules, they are not going to meet with success. For some unknown reason, Chicago turns in more protests to Pres. Frank Calder than any club in the organization.

Of course it is difficult to see one's own faults, but it must be very evident to the Hawks that they are deserving of even more penalties than they receive. They put up a loud protest last night and it was impossible to convince Manager Bill Tobin that Taffy Abel and Helge Bostrum did not resort to foul tactics on almost every Bruin attack.

The Hawks have some of the cleverest youngsters in the N. H. L., but they lack a uniform attack. They function at times but generally they are racing around and going no place in particular. Give Art Ross the Hawks and there is not a team in the league capable of taking their measure in five game series.

Ehmke to Try Comeback With A's

Philadelphia, Feb. 11 (AP)—Howard Ehmke, veteran right-hander of the Athletics until last year, may upset the popular theory that "they never come back." Ehmke announced his retirement last fall and as a free agent he is eligible to sign with any club desiring his services.

Ehmke, hero of the opening world series game between the Athletics and Chicago in 1929, said today his arm felt "pretty good" and that he would go to Athletics' Florida camp under his own auspices. which means that he will "pay the freight."

First Practice for Tech Crew Tonight

Coach Bill Haines of Technology will hold crew practice at the Tech boathouse tonight, and ensuing workouts will consist of calisthenics, running, and work-out on the machine until such a time when it will be possible to take to the water.

With the large number of men on hand this year Coach Haines said it was quite probable that seven varsity crews could be formed, three of which will be 150's.

BANQUET FOR SOX PILOT

By JOE CASHMAN

The Winter League will convene tonight for the first time in 15 years to honor John "Shano" Collins, a Boston boy who has reached the heights in the baseball world.

All the surviving members of this organization of royal rooters, which flourished during the era when championship teams were as common in Boston as have been latest end outfits during recent years, as well as "Shano's" legion of boyhood pals and admirers from Charlestown and Newton, have been invited to gather around the festive board at the Hotel Essex at 6 p. m.

According to John S. Dooley, who has done the inviting, there will be about 150, including several former baseball stars, present to pay their respects to the new Red Sox pilot.

Bob Quinn need worry no longer about Rookie Al Marquardt and his prize silver foxes. The Nashville infielder, who several days ago returned his contract unsigned with a note saying that he wouldn't play ball this season unless he could find somebody to care for his foxes, sent in the document signed today with the following letter:

Dear Mr. Quinn:

Received your letter and am making preparations to board my foxes. I am boarding them with a guarantee of replacement in case of death, so I don't have to worry about anything now except baseball.

I have the utmost confidence that I will make good, for the big league teams we played against last season didn't look so hot to me.

Am getting in shape rapidly and looking forward to a great season. AL MARQUARDT.

Much better news than that, however, came to Quinn just before Marquardt's letter. It was the guarantee that Tom Oliver would be in the fold this season.

Passing the Puck

Any doubt as to whether or not George Owen had made the N. H. L. grade was dispelled last night. Not only did the former Harvard star come through with the winning goal, but he has turned in a whale of an all-around game.

George Owen's shot which produced the winning goal was one of the fastest and best executed of the season. Owen let fly just as Taffy Abel started to back up and drove the puck through the former U. S. Olympic player's legs. Chuck Gardiner did not have a chance for the disc traveled at lightning speed and was in all the way.

Taffy Abel came out of the game with a badly bruised shin bone and he was taken to the Haymarket Relief Hospital for an X-ray. Taffy deserved to take away at least one memento for he high sticked every Bruin who came within his reach.

From the exhibition they gave last night, the Hawks must be a bunch of tough hombres at home.

They were after Eddie Shore and Cooney Weiland from the start of the game without a let up. Both Shore and Weiland, especially the latter, took a severe beating.

Mickie Ion called a penalty on George Owen in the first period on a play which was more than half the length of the rink from where he was and right in front of Jerry Goodman.

From the first face off, it was evident that the Hawks were out to bring the Bruins down to their speed by the process of heavy body checking.

There were some weird penalties called last night. Twice Eddie Shore was ordered off the ice and on neither occasion could the best posted hockey authority account for the decision.

The Weiland goal was a smart play, for Cooney jumped through when Abel dropped Dit Clapper, gathered in a loose puck and beat Chuck Gardiner with a back hander.

Jim Howard, one of the most loyal Bruins rooters, saw his first hockey game in weeks last night. He has been polishing up his golf game in Miami, Fla.

Yesterday afternoon some of the strong armed boys stooped so low as to pull youngsters out of the rush seat line, outside the Garden. Their actions reached C. F. Adams, who immediately called a halt by sending a squad of police to protect the kids.

Husky Relay Team to Race Bowdoin

Ed Parsons, Northeastern relay coach, was officially notified that the Husky varsity mile quartet will be matched with Bowdoin and Villanova at the B. A. A. games, Saturday night, at Boston Arena. Northeastern was formerly matched with Bates, which lost the past two years to the Huskies in this meet.

LOW PRICE CARS HAVE LUXURY FEATURES

Few things are sacred to costly cars any more except size and custom bodies, points out D. E. Ralston, assistant general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co.

Volume has made possible such tremendous purchasing advantages that scarcely has a new feature been introduced on a high priced car before a means has been found to incorporate it in the low priced volume field, according to the Chevrolet executive.

"Witness the radiator screen grille," Ralston pointed out. "Popularized by one of America's finest cars, it became standard equipment within a year on every sport model in the new Chevrolet line. The adjustable driver's seat won enthusiastic endorsement when it made its public appearance on one of the higher priced cars, yet in no time at all it became a feature of every Fisher-Chevrolet body.

"This trend of fine car features to the low priced field developed only within the past few years. The feminine influence on car design gave impetus to the trend. But the thing that made it possible is the saving effected on tremendous purchases of materials by the large manufacturers, which in turn enables him to put those savings back into the car in the interest of greater comfort and smartness."

More Cars in U. S. Than Phones, Radios

Automobile ownership in the United States has multiplied 20 times in 20 years, and the motor vehicle is believed to be a greater necessity in the life of Americans than is the telephone or the radio.

There are 23,122,000 automobiles, while telephones number 20,394,000. There are 13,000,000 radio receiving sets.

Canada Now Third in Car Building

Canada ranked third among the countries of the world as a producer of motor cars in 1929, the Dominion was exceeded only by the United States and France.

The production of automobiles in Canada attained a new high record last year at 262,635 cars, valued at $177,313,000.

Trailer Trucks in Haul to Boston

THE NEW FIRESTONE all-non-skid balloon tires were used on these General Motors trucks which hauled 20 tons of tires from Akron, O., to Boston. These trailer trucks are claimed to be the biggest ever to be seen in this city.

GOAL REALIZED IN NEW AUBURN

Auburn's announcement of a big 98 h. p. straight-eight automobile, incorporating more than 100 features, many of them exclusive, and priced low, comes as a climax to six years' building toward a goal according to Gerry E. Lyons, newly appointed vice-president of the Hinchcliffe Motor Co., New England distributors of Auburn and Cord cars.

G. E. Lyons

It is the fulfilment of a policy of returning to the public the fruits of success in a better built automobile at less commensurate cost, he says.

In 1924 Auburn was one of the smaller, little-known companies. Today Auburn is one of the stronger automobile companies, a leader in engineering, and with manufacturing facilities and financial resources unsurpassed. Its combined engineering staffs total more than 200.

Premiums Rising on Car Insurance

Greater premiums for public liability and property damage insurance will be paid by automobile drivers in 23 states in the Union this year as a result of a survey of losses covering the years 1926 to 1929.

Greater speed, improved highways, allowing year-around use of automobiles; closed automobiles, allowing the same thing, and increased congestion are given as the reasons for the increases.

Sales Gains at 1931 N. Y. Auto Show

A canvass of leading sales executives shows that sales of cars introduced at this year's New York automobile show not only exceeded those at the 1930 show, but in a number of individual instances showed some remarkable gains.

Attendance during the week was somewhat under the previous high records, but the crowds represented a larger proportion of people who were actively in the market for new cars than was the case last year.

B. & M. Official Hits Unfair Truck Lines

Editor Boston American:

The Boston & Maine railroad appreciating the editorial thought expressed in the Boston Evening American on February 5 that the railroads "have a right to protection from unfair competition and from rate slashing by will o' the wisp bus lines." We are glad to have acceptance of this proposition.

Your editorial was introduced with the statement that "Boston & Maine employes join the railroad managers in a fight against the competition of the motorbus." We should like to call the fact that the interest of the railroad and its employes is more nearly directed to the inroads being made under conditions unfair to the railroads and railroad employes, and under conditions which threaten to undermine the railroad system with resultant loss to the public.

Motor coaches operating intrastate are subject to some test of public convenience and necessity (although there is no such test of buses on interstate runs). But the Independent motor trucks use the public highways in competition with the railroads, interstate or intra-state, pretty much as they please. They make any rates they wish, select any kind of business they want, are subject to no control, and to no check of discrimination or responsibility. Contrast this with the conditions as applied to the railroad, which provides (and thereafter maintains) its own right of way at great expense, is required by law to handle any traffic which offers, does this under any conditions of weather, between any or all points reached by rail, and at rates established by tariff filed with regulatory authorities, which may be changed only after long notice, and all under the strictest regulation of authorities of nation and state.

We submit that the conditions under which the railroad and its highway competitors operate should be equal, whether this means applying to motor vehicles the regulations which now apply to the railroads, or by relaxing railroad regulation to a point comparable with their highway competitors.

We believe that we can submit the inequitable nature of present conditions to a fair-minded public; we believe that to a fair-minded public it will be clear that the railroad employes are indeed justified in joining railroad management in asking for a square deal.

T. F. JOYCE,
Asst. Vice-President Boston & Maine Railroad.

Yes, Senator Copeland Is His Noted Doctor

Editor Boston American:

Following William Randolph Hearst's exclusion from France and his subsequent return to the United States, there was, as you know, a great deal of comment in your paper. Letters and articles appeared in which Mr. Hearst was praised and France condemned. You published an article of this nature, and the signature was that of Senator Copeland.

My question is: Is this Senator Copeland the same man who writes the medical articles which appear daily in the Boston American, and who signs himself as Royal M. Copeland, M. D.?

A reply at your convenience would be appreciated.

BUILT FOR A SCHOOL, this room at Charlestown State Prison has been pressed into use as a dormitory for 40 prisoners, because of the overcrowded condition of the century-old institution. The beds are jammed close together and, as in the cells, there are no sanitary provisions. The floor and finishings are of wood, a fire hazard, in spite of the sprinkler system, installed since the tragedy at Columbus, Ohio, prison last year snuffed out 300 lives. There are now 972 inmates at Charlestown, a record number, and the need for completion of the new prison at Norfolk with its 38 acres of land is urgent. Corridors at the Charlestown institution are also filled with beds. Every cell in the place is occupied.

HERE IS A CELL on the lower floor of Cherry Hill, the newest State Prison cell block, built more than 35 years ago. Other buildings are 80, 100 and 125 years old. This is one of the largest cells, measuring 16 by 8 feet, and three prisoners occupy it. Note that the floor is of wood, as is all the flooring in Cherry Hill. This constitutes one of the many fire hazards. The Cherry Hill cells have double doors.

CHAPTER 22

Clever Work

"WHEN THEY are able to state so positively, and at once, that the pillow case is not ours theirs, that makes our work all the easier," he declared. "It would really look hopeless if they said they were not sure."

At the beginning, Colt was an ignoramus about pillow cases but before he got through he knew a great deal about them. His tenacity, in view of repeated failures, seems all the more remarkable to me as I look back on it.

It was Detective Sergt. Gernback, a stolid, reliable fellow, who finally came proudly to the Commissioner's office with tidings. Gernback had taken his piece of the pillow into the office of a manufacturers agent, who promptly identified it as part of his own line.

"Ah, yes," he had told the detective. "I remember it very well. I have good cause to. It cost me a lot of money."

He had then explained to Gernback that these expensive pillow cases of which the piece shown to him was unquestionably a sample, had been sold by his house to a number of small stores scattered throughout New York City. The pillow cases in question were made up in the nature of an experiment. Despite their excellent quality, their gaudiness had made them almost unsalable.

Loud Style

The people who could afford that quality wouldn't stand for that style and the people who liked the style most ably could not afford the quality. Thus the manufacturers were left with almost the entire output unsold on their hands. For years they had been carried in stock, because of hopes which never materialized, and finally to prevent a total loss, had been offered at a great sacrifice to a lot of little junky stores throughout Manhattan.

"Has he got the sales slips?" asked Thatcher Colt.

Well, as to that, Detective Gernback couldn't say. The Commissioner hadn't ordered him to find out anything about sales slips. What he had asked him to do was to find the origin of the pillow cases and that, Detective Gernback, who seemed to think his good fortune was an evidence of superior cunning and competence, had triumphantly accomplished. Sales slips were no part of his thoughts and by voice and rolling eye he gave the Commissioner to understand that.

"Come on, Tony," said Thatcher Colt, "let's go down there and see what we can find."

The office of the Wigglestaff Pillow and Case Factory was just off Fifth Avenue in the Thirties — a crowded region, with dark buildings brass-plated with foreign names and trade names designed to catch the eye and impressions pushed by rich women's faces were hidden by the racks of dresses and coats which they propelled. Mr. Pearlman, the Manhattan agent for the Wigglestaff Company, was greatly flattered when Thatcher Colt entered his office, and his three stenographers stared up open-mouthed from their machines at the immaculate Police Commissioner.

Seven Stores

With suave kindness, Thatcher Colt explained what we were there for. Had Mr. Pearlman keep records of all his sales? Mr. Pearlman hemmed and hawed and said well, yes and no, and he couldn't be sure without looking. These particular pillow cases had been sold for cash and the duplicate delivery slips might have been destroyed. However, if we didn't mind waiting, he would investigate.

Presently he returned with the duplicate delivery slips in his hand. For this time, at least, we were playing in luck—that element which Thatcher Colt maintains cannot be disregarded in the in-

MEN RUINED IN CHARLESTOWN PRISON

Plumbing Lacking, Ventilation Inadequate in Honeycomb of Vaults

(Following is the second in the series of articles revealing conditions at the Charlestown State Prison.)

By ALAN FRAZER

Row upon row of cells, five galleries high.

A huge honeycomb of stone vaults—each entombing a man 16 hours a day, and 20 hours on Sundays. Each with an entrance so narrow I had to sidle in.

This is one of the ancient wings of that century-old bastile which I inspected in Charlestown State Prison.

These vaults, so much like caves or dens hewn in solid rock are dining room, bedroom and sanitary toilet, all in one.

The walls drip moisture from the heat condensing on the steel plate, dampening the bedding and the whole cramped interior.

In each cubicle the prisoners at Charlestown spend more than three-quarters of every week, month and year, more than three years out of every four.

A PUBLIC PERIL

From them this human salvage comes back into the world with lessened vitality and impoverished physique, to combat life under the handicap of a tarnished name.

Not for the sake of taking care of the prisoners, but for the sake of taking care of the public, such conditions point to a crying need of completing the new prison at Norfolk with all speed.

At Charlestown, the inmates have benefit of no plumbing whatsoever, no adequate ventilation.

I measured one of the smallest cells and found it four feet and four inches wide, eight feet long, seven feet high. Small enough but the squeezing sensation imparted by those granite walls a foot and a half thick made them seem even smaller, tombikes.

With my right shoulder against one side wall, I could all but touch

FROM PULPIT TO DEATH CHAIR

A Reporter's Story of the Famous Clarence Richeson Case

By BERT FORD

(Who worked on the case as a reporter)

Following is the third installment in a gripping series of articles on famous New England murder cases appearing daily in the Boston Evening American.

AVIS LINNELL'S SUDDEN DEATH from poison came like a bolt from the blue in Hyannisport, the peaceful Cape Cod community where she had lived from birth.

But great as was the sensation there, it was overshadowed by the outraged feelings of the congregation of Immanuel Baptist Church in Cambridge when its members learned that their young pastor, the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, was suspected of the murder of his former sweetheart.

Eloquent, magnetic and handsome, Mr. Richeson had become tremendously popular in Cambridge. Few of his flock knew much about his courtship with Miss Violet Kinnama, wealthy Vassar graduate of Brookline, and none of them had ever heard of his prior infatuation for Avis Linnell, the little choir girl at his former pastorate on the Cape.

Mere hint of suspicion of their pastor shocked them beyond expression and their devotion and loyalty were to their credit. They stood solidly behind him and insisted that he be furnished with every possible defense and safeguard.

HAD FAITH IN HIM

Nor was doubt of Mr. Richeson's guilt confined to his Cambridge congregation. There were many in Hyannis over whose religious destinies he had briefly presided, who believed him innocent and clung tenaciously to the theory of suicide.

This divided sentiment, plus lack of tangible evidence, made it extremely difficult for investigators. Police and newspaper men were far more considerate of the rights of a man of the cloth than they may have been given credit for in the hectic hours and days that followed the tragedy. Scraps of evidence which, in the case of an accused layman, would have been pounced upon, were carefully scrutinized, weighed and screened.

This caution which attained the level of courtesy, was actuated not alone because of the fact that Mr. Richeson was a clergyman, but in deference to the church as a whole. And this very element proved no small obstacle

HANDLED WITH GLOVES

Those pursuing clues would argue that if guilty, a clergyman deserved less sympathy than the ordinary run of men, in that his training and profession should have made him all the more alert to the enormity of such a crime. But despite this, Mr. Richeson's case was handled with gloves, and at all times, he was shown every possible consideration.

Avis Linnell was buried from Hyannis Baptist Church, where she used to sit spellbound while her minister lover was preaching and from the choir loft of which her clear soprano voice was heard at Sunday services.

The funeral and burial in the village cemetery was marked by all the pathos that attends the return of girls who go to big cities and fall victims of tragedy. Her schoolmates were at the church and grave, among them a high school admirer whose boyhood dream was shattered by the coming of the dashing young preacher.

FEW BOY FRIENDS

Miss Linnell had always been a girl of exemplary character. She had few boy friends. She attended church socials and school parties but schoolmates noticed that with the advent of the new minister she devoted all of her attentions to religious affairs. She spent much of her time at the church in Hyannis. Her body was exhumed some

DIVORCED EIGHT DAYS, TO WED SATURDAY

Daughter of Late Albert E. Pillsbury to Take Plumber as Husband No. 2

Mrs. Elizabeth Pillsbury Phillips of Auburndale, daughter of the late former Atty.-Gen. Albert E. Pillsbury, who, eight days ago was divorced from her medical student husband, will marry Ellsworth W. Poole, an Auburndale plumber, next Saturday, it was revealed today.

The couple filed marriage intentions at Newton and then appeared in Newton district court before Judge William F. Eacon and had the friendly ceremony waived. They will be married at the Poole home in Owatowna st., Auburndale.

Mrs. Phillips secured her divorce at Reno. She testified that her husband, Richard B. Phillips, now studying medicine at Edinburgh, Scotland, though able to support her, failed to do so. She also was granted the custody of their only child, Albert E. Pillsbury Phillips.

It was announced that the wedding ceremony would be entirely simple and unpretentious. Mrs. Phillips who gives her age as 23 is 15 years younger than Poole, who is plumbing inspector for the city of Newton.

Mrs. Phillips, with her brother, Parker Webster Pillsbury, shares the balance of the estate of the late former attorney-general which is understood to be about $570,000. His will, filed Dec. 31, also provided for gifts of $25,000 each to Yale, Harvard, Princeton and Columbia, for the express purpose of combating the modern feminist movement.

LEGISLATIVE ORDER CALLS FOR SPLIT

Eight Senators and 24 Representatives on Act on District Reapportionment

The move to divide the State into 15 congressional districts got under way in the Legislature today with the committee on rules considering an order calling for the appointment of a special committee to perform the task.

The order, introduced in the Senate yesterday by Republican floor leader Roland F. Fish, of Brookline, and in the House by Representative Victor F. Jewell, calls for a committee of eight senators and 24 representatives.

REPORT APRIL 15

The order requires that the committee report on or before April 15 a new lay-out of 15 districts to replace the present 16-district plan, in accordance with the congressional reapportionment of members of the national House under which Massachusetts will lose one representative.

The redistricting will go forward under conditions far different from those of past years. Heretofore the State has been heavily Republican in its legislative branches and a Republican governor has always been in the executive suite to approve the plan adopted.

This year the Republican Legislature will have to make a lay-out of districts which will meet with the approval of a Democratic governor.

VETO WEAPON

In the House, at least, there will not be enough Republican votes to pass over a veto any plan which the leaders of that party would want. In the event that the governor and the Legislature fail to agree upon a congressional district plan, the alternative would be the election of 15 congressmen at large.

Republicans look with fear, on that proposition in view of the present political complexion of the State in recent years.

How to solve the problem promises to be one of the most interesting that will come before the Legislature at the current session.

The rules committee has not yet set a date for a hearing on the orders filed yesterday.

JAM ON BRIDGE TIES TRAFFIC

A tie-up of motor and trolley traffic for nearly an hour resulted when the Chelsea North Bridge, between Chelsea and Charlestown, jammed when within two inches of closing. A chauffeur and two were fined up for no more than a half mile on each side of the bridge.

The bridge had been opened to permit passage of a boat. Repeated efforts by the draftenders failed to move the bridge, and finally a tugboat was called in to pull. A rope was attached and after several minutes of pulling the span closed.

FITZGERALD IS 68 AND HAPPY

John F. Fitzgerald radiated through his 68th birthday today.

Beaming happily, the former mayor pronounced it "the happiest of them all," and then delivered some sage advice on the means of happiness.

"The so-called depression, uppermost in our minds nowadays, can easily be turned to a means of happiness," he said, "by the pride one gets in trying to help."

"The people of Boston could all enjoy happiness if they took advantage of that pride that comes from helping the other fellow.

"Don't leave this unemployment to the Governor, or the mayor, or to anyone else, but pitch in and help yourself—then you'll be happy," he added.

The ex-mayor asked that his thanks be extended through the Boston Evening American to the hundreds who called, telephoned wrote or telegraphed congratulations.

"This is the happiest birthday of all. I thank God for my return to health after the serious illness of last fall," he said.

The rest of his plans for the day he revealed, include "work as usual and then top it off with a dinner party with the family.

Mrs. Belmont Tells of Shaw

MRS. AUGUST BELMONT told the Women's Republican Club in a lecture today how to understand George Bernard Shaw. (Staff photo.)

MRS. BELMONT IN TALK ON SHAW

"George Bernard Shaw is not so much of a cynic as people seem to think," said Mrs. August Belmont, close friend of the noted philosopher, here today on a series of lectures on Shaw and his works.

Mrs. Belmont, who some years ago won fame for herself on the dramatic stage as Eleanor Robson, has always been an admirer of Shaw and knows as much about his complex personality as anyone in the country.

Today at the meeting of the Women's Republican Club at the Hotel Statler Mrs. Belmont delivered a lecture on Shaw and how to understand him.

When asked why Shaw recently ridiculed the talking pictures, yet consented to be in one himself, Mrs. Belmont replied

"Mr. Shaw really is practical after all. He gets good publicity by appearing in a talking picture, and publicity certainly does not hurt him any!. He would be rather impractical, would he not, if he refused to appear in one?"

Mrs Belmont is stopping at the home of Mrs. Harold Russell at 665 Chestnut Hill ave., Brookline. Mrs. Russell is known as an admirer of Shaw.

'Rain' to Rout Drouth

RED CROSS TO FILL BARREL

Six attractive girls, wearing the white uniforms of a Red Cross nurse, attracted considerable attention today as they toured downtown Boston on a unique rain barrel float, while canvassing money for the Red Cross drouth relief drive.

A gigantic barrel of stalwart staves and rusty bands was mounted on a truck which bore the slogans, "Help us fill the empty water barrel" and "The only way question on which we all agree—immediate relief." The girls, each with her individual water pail, went into office buildings soliciting nickels, dimes, quarters—anything you wanted to give.

Pedestrians stopped to throw their spare change into the big barrel on the truck. Everywhere it went the drouth relief float, with its six charming attendants, was of interest.

For the remainder of the week the float will travel the business district in hope of collecting money to fill the Boston quota of the national Red Cross drive.

The girls with the float today are employes of the Telephone company. On the following days girls from the Boston Elevated, the Boston Electric Co. and the Boston Consolidated Gas Co. will do the canvassing.

He borrowed $350,000 from a Worcester bank, added his own fortune and appeared on the road to perhaps millions when the war came, then the shrinking of values and eventually he found himself with but $60 left.

ACUTE Indigestion

—a Critical Test of the HEART!

Attacks of acute indigestion are no joke! They impose a severe strain on the heart. When indigestion strikes so sharply as to be "acute" and when you're simply breathless with gas pressing against the heart, pure indigestion, acid is the cause. Excess acids formulas in the stomach sours the food and turns it into a gas, nerves which almost doubles you up with pains, stomach distension and gas pressure. Pyrosan, a remarkable new tablet stops acidity correctly. # MAYOR RUSSELL THREATENS TO TAKE LEHAN CASE TO COURT

MOVE STARTED TO COLLECT HUGE SUM

Anticipated Move in Council to Oust the City Treasurer Fails to Materialize

Threatened court action faced Treasurer Henry F. Lehan of Cambridge today for an alleged defiect in the city's finances.

An anticipated move by Mayor Richard M. Russell to oust the storm-centered treasurer failed to materialize at last night's Council meeting.

Reports had been current since a State audit reported a financial shortage that Mayor Russell would make his seventh attempt to oust Lehan by again submitting the name of a successor.

Six nominees of the mayor have already been turned down by the Council, hot debates attending each move.

ORDERS LEGAL ACTION

Possibility of court action was seen when Mayor Russell in a letter to City Solicitor Thomas F. Sullivan directed him to take whatever legal steps are necessary to collect with interest, the following items.

"One hundred and twenty-seven thousand and eight hundred and ninety-six dollars and six cents lost in the collapse of the Tremont Trust Co.

"All taxes which have not been collected in accordance with the law.

"Two thousand five hundred and seventy dollars and 52 cents cash shortage in the city treasurer's office on March 4, 1930.

"For the Cemetery Trust funds, the total amount of moneys taken from the income thereof for the payment of $500 a year to the cashier in the city treasurer's office.

"Also any other amounts which City Solicitor Sullivan is of the opinion the city has a just claim."

The letter was quickly answered by Councilor Patrick J. Delaney, who has led the fight in the council against Russell.

WOULD DEFEND HIM

Atty. Delaney announced that City Treasurer Lehan successfully defended himself in an action to collect $500,000 which was brought against him seven years ago.

"City Treasurer Henry F. Lehan is ready to go right back into the same court and defend another action," said Atty. Delaney. "Mr. Lehan is confident that he will again be successful in court and I will be on hand to defend him if such a situation arises."

Atty. Delaney warned that Mayor Russell should look up the law carefully and avoid, for the taxpayers, the heavy expense that is entailed through court action.

SAWYER SEEKS PROHIBITION CONVENTION

Declares Ratification in Bay State Was Dictated by Crane and Weeks

Charging that ratification of the Eighteenth Amendment in Massachusetts was "dictated" by the late U. S. Senators W. Murray Crane and John W. Weeks, Representative Roland D. Sawyer of Ware today asked that Massachusetts lead the way toward a national constitutional convention on prohibition.

Representative Sawyer, an ordained minister, urged his bill to memorialize Congress for such a convention before the legislative committee on constitutional law at a crowded meeting in Gardner Auditorium at the State House.

"Those in the Legislature at the time, as I was, may recall that the majority party, the Republicans, did not know whether to ratify until after the late Senators Lodge, Crane and Weeks met at Lenox and voted 2 to 1 to ratify. Senator Lodge was the dissenter," he said.

"Word was sent and the amendment was ratified.

"What chance had the average voter in Massachusetts on the question?" he asked.

"We can only get out of the tangle by a national constitutional convention.

"Governors Fly of this state and Cross of Connecticut asked for such and Prof. Mondy of Boston University Law School points out that such a convention can be confined to that one question."

Representative Sawyer cited the recent decision of Judge Clark of New Jersey in federal court there as a proof of the need of a convention system.

"By the convention system the direct sentiment of the people may be felt instead of the action of representatives who move and act along party lines," he said.

On another of his bills to restore regulation of manufacture and sale of liquor by states Rep. Sawyer urged beer of 3.75 alcohol in volume and cited the overcrowded jails as the result of bad liquor.

"Before prohibition our jails were comparatively empty, but today bad liquor has overcrowded them," he said. "Massachusetts should be able to grant permission for the manufacture of beer of at least 3.75 per cent alcohol in volume."

He was opposed by Orville S. Poland, counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, who warned that such percentage was intoxicating and was always judged intoxicating even before prohibition.

MARSHAL FOCH'S WAR MEMOIRS

AMERICAN TROOPS CALLED ON TO SAVE ALLIES IN CRISIS

"TOWARD the close of the Spring of 1918, France and England were finding the greatest difficulty in obtaining from their national resources the men necessary to make good the losses which their armies had suffered.

"However, there was ONE POSSIBLE REMEDY for this trying situation, namely, an appeal to the United States, whose immense reservoir of men was still untapped. To what extent was America, at this period, capable of bringing to the Allies the IMMEDIATE HELP of which they stood in need?"

—Extract from Marshal Foch's Memoirs.

Steps that he took to solidify the Allied resistance to the onslaughts of the Germans on the Western Front during the early part of their big drive that started on March 21, 1918, were outlined in yesterday's instalment by Marshal Foch. His authority as Supreme Commander now gave him the power to unify the military movements along the entire front.

In today's instalment he tells of the end of the fierce battle of Flanders and emphasizes the exhausted state of the Allied armies after several years of fighting which made IMMEDIATE HELP in troops from America a vital necessary. He also tells of his request to General Pershing that all the American troops then available be put into action as soon as possible, and of the victorious assault of American troops at Cantigny on May 24, 1918.

By MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH,

Translated from the French by Colonel T. Bentley Mott.

THE BATTLE OF FLANDERS had come to an end. It had occupied more than a month of violent and highly sustained efforts. That the German advance represented a less deep penetration than what he effected on the Somme at the end of March was due to two facts: His objective, the Channel coast, was in this case much closer, while we, by moving troops up rapidly, succeeded, as it was our duty to do, in stopping his rush.

The danger of losing touch on the sea forced the Allied armies to fight on their front lines, and resistance in depth was precluded through lack of ground for maneuvering. On account of the difficulty of reinforcing in time the northern extremity of the vast and seriously shaken Allied front, it was several times in grave danger.

However, while the battle had not obtained for the Germans the strategic results they had aimed at, it could be started up again. The enemy might find it to his interest to resume his advance with the intention of gaining the Channel coast at any price, and, by intensifying his submarine warfare in the adjoining waters, hamper communications with England and isolate the power of Great Britain.

The battle had already produced tactical results which, on balance, were unquestionably to the detriment of the Allies.

The appreciable loss of ground we had suffered left the Flanders hills (Rouge, Noir and Scherpenberg), buttresses of the northern Allied line, under the close menace of the German salients centers of Mount Kemmel. Our retention of these hills must be insured all on full the security of our front was not to be disastrously compromised.

I therefore drew General de Mitry's attention to the necessity not only of strongly reinforcing the defence of the hills themselves but of extending it to the ground at the foot of the ridges so as to prevent the enemy from surrounding the summits and operating to the satisfied between them. Local operations, undertaken on May 4th (1918) by the Army Detachment of the North, enabled some progress to be made in this sense.

I continued to emphasize the necessity of holding on where the men stood and never making a voluntary retirement. I once more laid down the line of conduct to be followed and gave instructions that, in the future, if any important withdrawal was contemplated, it must be submitted beforehand for my approval.

Americans Called
26th Division Among Troops Assigned to Battle

I also drew up a note dealing with general principles prescribing the rules which should govern in the organization of a defensive battle, in order that unity of doctrine among the Allies might bring about unity of action.

Another result of the battle of Flanders was to expose the Bethune coal basin to bombardment by German artillery. This produced a serious disturbance in the working of these mines and affected the output of the munition factories and railways which they supplied.

We were able to remedy this situation by certain measures whose execution was admirably assured by the British Army and the French Military Mission attached to British General Headquarters.

The battle of Flanders had been a great drain upon Allied manpower. The British reserves had melted in the struggle and the calls upon the French reserves in their behalf amounted already to ten divisions.

To enable General Petain to reconstitute these reserves without weakening his front line, I had arranged with Field Marshal Haig that the British divisions which had been withdrawn from the battle should be placed in a quiet sector of the French front.

In this way, they set free a similar number of French units for reconstituting reserves; but the movement could only be carried out slowly.

At first General Petain received four British divisions constituting the Corps. They were assigned to the French Sixth Army and towards the middle of May they were put into the Craonne-Loivre front.

These battles that had been going on incessantly for a month, brought about another result which has already been referred to—the equilibrium in the distribution of French forces had been upset.

At the beginning of May, 47 French divisions were north of the Oise (23 in the front line and 24 in reserve); there remained only 85 divisions to hold the front from Oise to the Swiss frontier, namely 43 in line and 12 in reserve. General Petain drew my attention to the danger presented by this situation.

The great wastage suffered by the British Army had to be taken into account; but a renewal of the German attack between the Oise and Lys was always possible and might have serious consequence for the Allies, on account of the proximity of decisive objectives.

I therefore maintained a group of four divisions north of the Somme, and another group of three same strength south of that river. This did not prevent the despatch of units to Flanders to feed the Army Detachment of the north.

At the same time, I did all that was possible to facilitate the task of the French Commander-in-Chief by making use of the American troops, requesting that they forthwith be put into action as soon as possible, or assigned to quiet sectors.

The American First Division had already been placed on the front of the First French Army, on April 26, and it soon gave proof of its military qualities, by taking the village of Cantigny by assault May 28.

I asked General Pershing to send the 26th, 42nd and 2nd Americans divisions as soon as possible to the battle front, and to permit the infantry of the 32nd, 3rd and 5th American divisions to be employed as reinforcements for the French divisions which were coming out of battle much reduced in numbers; this would enable them to be rapidly used again in quiet sectors.

I also suggested to him that American pilots might be sent to French Air Squadrons, where they could pursue their training and, at the same time, lighten the work for their French comrades.

420,000 Men Lost
Terrific British Wastage Worries Foch Greatly

At the same time we reduced the requirements of the Army Detachment of the North, and diminished its field of action. The heavy losses which it was incurring seemed to be out of all proportion to the tactical results obtained.

After making allowances for the severe conditions which obtained in the Flanders fighting, and especially the intense bombardments by gas shell, it was evident that these losses were in great part due to the inexperience of the men and a lack of vigilence on the part of those in command.

General de Mitry was therefore instructed to hasten the readjustment of his front, with the object of establishing a solid defensive system on the general lines of which were traced for him.

Furthermore General Petain was requested to resume the training of the small infantry and artillery units, selecting for this work generals and field officers who were thoroughly familiar with war and had already practiced, especially in the early days of the conflict, the sort of operations with which the troops should now be familiarized.

Nevertheless in spite of all the ingenuity displayed by the High Command to meet the exigencies of battle, one vital problem dominated the general situation of the Allied armies in France in midspring of 1918—the problem of numerical strength.

Several years of war had brought about on its offensives in 1917, the British Army suffered in the spring of 1918, two tremendous blows, one after the other; the German attack on the Arras-Amiens front, started on March 21st, and the German attack in Flanders, begun on April 9th. The first had cost the British Army 120,000 men, the second increased this figure to nearly 300,000, including 14,000 officers.

The reinforcements sent from England were far from making good these losses, especially among the officers and non-commissioned officers. It is true that by July and August, the return of many men who had been wounded in the first battles could be counted upon.

It was also possible to foresee that before the expiration of this time the military laws recently passed by the English Parliament would have borne effect. The question, however, was how to provide until then for the enormous shortage in British effectives.

Failing to find any other solution for the problem, Field Marshal Haig resigned himself to abolishing the divisions he was unable to reconstitute; namely, five after the German offensive on the Somme, and four after the battle of Flanders. The British Army was thus reduced to 51 fighting divisions.

The disappearance of so many divisions caused in addition to other serious consequences, a reduction in the Allied reserves at the very moment when the number of available German troops was augmented. (According to the calculations of the French Staff, these amounted to 60 divisions on April 25, 70 divisions May 10th, and 81 on May 19th.

On May 13, I intervened with Marshal Haig in an effort to secure the retention of all the British divisions, pointing out to him certain measures which, in my opinion, would enable this result to be achieved. He declared, however, that they were impossible of realization.

I then requested him to reconstitute at least some of the divisions it had been decided to suppress, if only to show the government in London the importance attached to maintaining in France the highest possible number of British divisions.

In the face of this insistence, the Marshal urged the War Office to send him, in the absence of men capable of standing active operations, contingents of inferior quality, but capable of being employed in quiet sectors. In this way the general reserve would not be impaired.

Although I appreciated the value of this proposal, I at once pointed out the danger it presented if, instead of being considered as a temporary expedient, it established for the future a separation of the British Army into two classes of divisions, one for battle and the other for holding the line. A like motion, it is true, was in considerable favor with the Germans, but that did not make it any the more sound.

On the contrary, the thing to be desired was to have divisions of approximately the same quality and equally capable of fighting.

By departing from this policy, certain governments would be encouraged not to put forth their best efforts. In order to bring the matter to a head, I requested the French Government to lay it immediately with Lloyd George.

I myself talked to General Wilson on the subject on May 20 at Abbeville. I urged upon him the imperative, two-fold necessity of reconstituting all the British divisions and of excluding any definite distinction amongst them.

Crisis Up to U. S.
Allies Pin Hopes on Great American Reserve

General Wilson expressed himself as in entire agreement with me, and shortly afterwards he informed me that the British Government had decided to send to France 70,000 more men that had been previously provided for.

Meanwhile the German attack of May 27 on the Chemin des Dames made a new hole in the British strength. Five British divisions were involved in this attack and suffered heavy losses. I at once wrote a personal letter to General Wilson, asking him to hurry the filling up of the British units.

On his part, aMrshal Haig forwarded me, on June 10, the program for the reconstruction of his divisions. Expressing my satisfaction at seeing now settled a question to which he himself attached so great an importance, I drew the aMrshal's attention, on the one hand to the advisability of having it understood that the employment of the "B" contingents was a purely temporary measure and, on the other hand, to the necessity of supplying divisions which had been filled up by these contingents with large numbers of machine guns and much artillery.

However, it would have been rash to count on the British Army being put in proper condition again in the near future. Indeed, it took a good many weeks to reforge it as a fighting instrument and put it into proper shape.

The last weeks of July arrived before it had regained its battle value, and it was not until the beginning of September that it got back all its units, excepting always two divisions which were definitely skeletonized. Thus, from the middle of April to the middle of July, the situation of the British Army remained extremely precarious.

Without having suffered as much as the British, the French Army which had hastened to the latter's aid, had undergone many ordeals since March 21, which could not but have an influence upon its effectives. The front entrusted to it had been increased by seventy-five miles, this notably of its divisions had been engaged ninety-six times and their losses had been considerable especially during the battle of Flanders.

Thus General Petain also was confronted by great difficulty in filling up his ranks. The resources he had at his command for this purpose did not make it possible to wait for the incorporation of the conscripts of the 1919 class, as these recruits would only be ready during the month of October. He therefore requested the government to return him 200,000 men employed in munition factories in the interior, but only 40,000 were furnished.

Consequently, toward the close of the Spring of 1918, France and England were finding the greatest difficulty in obtaining from their national resources the men necessary to make good the losses which their armies had suffered.

However, there was one possible remedy for this trying situation, namely, an appeal to the United States, whose immense reservoir of men was still untapped. To what extent was America, at this period, capable of bringing to the Allies the IMMEDIATE help of which they stood in need?

Scene of U. S. Victory

THIS MAP visualizes the location of Cantigny, which was captured by American troops of the First Division on May 28, 1918, and show its relation to the Allied line in that region. The shaded area indicates the ground that had been captured by the Germans during their offensive that started on March 21, 1918.

Cantigny Is First Test of Yanks

The battle of Cantigny, which served to demonstrate the fighting ability of American doughboys, was fought on May 28, 1918. The American First Division, commanded by Maj.-Gen. Robert Lee Bullard, was selected to capture and hold the fortified town of Cantigny, which was the point furthest west reached by the German drive in the salient west of Montdidier.

Cantigny gave excellent observation facilities, dominated the high ground of the Avre and was in the line of advance to recapture the southern branch of the Amiens — Compiegne Railroad. The Germans had intrenched there, organized strong positions, armed the town with machine guns, and laid concrete and timber in the woods back of the town.

Gen. Bullard picked the 28th Infantry, commanded by Col. Hanson E. Ely (now Maj.-Gen. Ely), supported by a battalion of the 18th Infantry, one company of the 1st Engineers, the 1st Field Artillery (commanded by Gen. Summerall), aviation, tanks and flame throwers.

After an hour of artillery preparation, the attack began at 6:45 on the morning of May 28. Under cover of a rolling barrage the advance started and was carried out with perfect precision. The objective was captured skillfully and the new line intrenched. The Germans counter-attacked twice that day and again the next day but were repulsed by the American forces.

Congratulations came at once from Gen. Pershing, from Gen. Petain and other French commanders, and Clemenceau expressed his profound admiration for the American troops.

Bullard Says: 'Cantigny Showed We Could Fight'

General Robert Lee Bullard, commander of the American First Division at Cantigny, later commander of the Second American Army in France, made the following comment yesterday on the American victory at Cantigny, alluded to in today's instalment of Marshal Foch's memoirs.

"Cantigny was a battle which taught the Allies that Americans can fight. I would not say that they were finally convinced, because Allied generals continued to show considerable doubt about our "amateur soldiers" for some months afterward. But the general staff watched that battle and were well pleased. They had little else to be pleased with on that day, because the Boche forces had broken through the day before and were driving demoralized French and British troops backward toward the Marne.

Gen. Bullard.

"Gen. Pershing watched the battle of Cantigny and on returning to his headquarters evidently met with doubt among Allied military leaders regarding our ability to hold the line.

"The French had taken Cantigny twice, I was told, and had been thrown out. Gen. Pershing sent me a message that under no circumstances must we relire from the village which was important strategically. The message was unnecessary. We intended to hold it, and we did."

Rewarded for Gallantry

REWARD. In recognition of its gallant service in capturing Cantigny on May 28, 1918, the French Croix de Guerre was awarded the 28th Regiment, American First Division. Maj.-Gen. E. F. McGlachlin is shown in the picture pinning the French decoration on the regimental colors of the 28th Regiment. (U. S. Signal Corps official photo.)

BABE RUTH AND KNUTE ROCKNE TO MAKE SERIES OF SHORT SPORT FILMS

UNIVERSAL SIGNS TWO STARS

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 11—Sports are generally recognized as having more audience appeal than any other subject. That is why Universal will star Babe Ruth and Knute Rockne in a series of short sports subjects, also to be supervised by them. Christy Walsh acting as their agent, put over the deal. That reminds me that Knute Rockne has announced that he has not signed with any other company, that his allegiance is to Universal.

Universal will not stop with baseball and football. They will make a series of short reel subjects, including swimming, tennis, boxing and golf and other numerals. I suppose they will get Jack Dempsey for boxing, Helen Wills Moody and William Tilden for tennis and Leo Diegel for golf.

Louella O. Parsons

Knute Rockne is due to arrive here Saturday to have a conference with Stanley Bergerman in charge of Universal short subjects and Carl Laemmle. The pictures will be known as the all-American sports series. The idea is a fine one of the most interesting things that has happened in the movies in a long time.

WHETHER OR NOT "The Royal Family of Broadway" brings in financial returns to Paramount makes no difference in the quality of Ina Claire's performance. She is a good one, good that Samuel Goldwyn signed her on a five year contract. She will give up the stage for the movies. Wise chap, Sammy Goldwyn. He signs her and then while he is locating a vehicle for her he loans her to Pathe to star in "Rebound." Remember I said Ann Harding had decided against making the picture, and that Pathe was negotiating with Miss Claire? She ought to be excellent in "Rebound." If we are to judge by her performance on the stage in the same play. You may look to see Ina Claire as popular a headliner on the screen under Samuel Goldwyn's management as she was on the stage.

THERE IS NO DOUBT that time changes our ideas. Twenty years ago Marie Dorro was starred in a play called 'Lilling of the Field.' It was considered the last word in naughtiness, the play wasn't particularly good but it had enough spice to bring people into the theater. Universal is now doing a story also by William Hurlburt, author of "Lilies of the Field." This time it is called "Lilies of Broadway." The author himself will be on hand when it is produced. He is now at Universal City working with Gladys Lehman on a story for John Murray Anderson. I will say for Mr. Hurlburt, he knows how to give the dear public what it wants.

GORDON GROUP IN CONCERT

By MOSES SMITH

The Gordon String Quartet played in Jordan Hall for the second time this season last evening in a program that listed quartets by Brahms in A minor John Alden Carpenter in the same key, and Ravel in F major, this new chamber music organization of Cambridge performed pleasurable first impressions.

Although the performances was by no means free from technical lapses, notably in the first movement of the Brahms the four men showed a commendable zeal sometimes excessive, coupled with the instinct of the composer. There was excellent tonal balance, a fine respect on the part of each member for the leading of the various parts. At no time did the performance degenerate into a virtuoso solo by the excellent Jacques Gordon with string accompaniment.

The Carpenter Quartet, a comparative novelty, disclosed a first movement in the vein of Chaikovsky at his more passionate moments, Debussy of "Pelleas" in the second movement, and—in the finale—solid jazz syncopation, approximately a decade ago. On first hearing it was not an impressive composition.

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

TO JUDGE by the numerous laughs the audience at the first showing of "Sit Tight" yesterday, the stuff of the picture is a stepladder hit for Joe E. Brown almost as the way through, and of interest for Winnie Lightner. The whole structure of the movie hangs on the ability of these two and on the part the wife fails to Mr. Brown. The fun consists of the nonsense that a Wall Street couple, of the type which the difference was Lord and Lady Peabody, get themselves all tangled up in a mess of self and Mr. Brown is in her employ as secretary and as a supposed wife. A rather uncertain romance in between with the Italian Count Del Prado and Paul Gregory is the top up and down as the weathervane, but nobody pays much attention to them for much is the than. The two seems to be made in order for the comic relief of Mr. Brown and Lightner, and of the pair Mr. Brown is the funnier. Miss Lightner tries hard to be funny, but she is not. Miss Lightner and Mr. Brown put forth a valiant effort to get a laugh, but it is not an effort to get a laugh, but it is not an effort to get a laugh.

STAR'S DEBUT MADE AT MET

Lyda Roberti, the Polish girl who has become an overnight hit on the Broadway stage made her first appearance in America at the Metropolitan in Boston during the theatre's Tercentenary Week last September. Miss Roberti was a member at that time of the book and lyric writers' staff here at Paramount's Astor theatre in New York and was picked to fill a vacancy with her vocal ability. The Boston engagement spoke volumes of her versatility, for in the course of her two weeks in Boston Miss Roberti appeared in four different productions, including Tennessee Ingram's singing and dancing band and Lucy Monroe's grand opera company.

VETS OF LAND RUSH GUESTS AT KEITH'S

At RKO Keith's last night six elderly men were special guests of the management and of Richard Dix screen star and leading character in the current attraction, Cimarron. These men were pioneers in the Land Rush to Oklahoma in 1889 which is the basis of the picture. The men now reside in and around Boston.

Those who attended the invitation of Mr. Dix were: Seth K. Humphrey, 9 Brackney st., W. F. Seaman 872 Washington st., Patrick Murphy, 450 Broadway, H. C. Stokes, 45 Milk st. and George Whitney of the State Street Trust Co., all of Boston, Vincent McGuire of 21 Rhodes st., Lowell also joined the Boston friends to spin a yarn or two of other days.

They were entertained at dinner before the performance. At the theater they witnessed those vivid scenes of another day unfold on the screen.

A score among those covered wagon veterans. Some there unanimous in attendance, the others could not attend the dinner and the reason of the characters portrayed. It was reconstruction of incidents in their early lives for each of them, they declared.

The custom of saying "God bless you!" to the sneezer originated, according to Strada, among the ancients, who, through an opinion of danger attending it, made use of a short prayer, as "Jupiter, help me."

'Kick Off' Excess Weight at Hips and Thighs for a Graceful Carriage

Simple Rules Given by a Noted Beautician

By MISS HUDDLESTON.

ALTHOUGH the shoulders seem an awfully long way from the hips and thighs the intricate muscle structure of the body is such that we never go in for any routine without first doing at least one gentle, but generally strenuous exercise to prepare all of the muscles for the work that is to come.

Otherwise sprains or strains are apt to result. Therefore, the first exercise in the hip and thigh routine is the same as the first one in the waist and abdomen series.

Josephine Huddleston

For the benefit of those who missed the previous articles I'll have to repeat the mechanics of the exercise. Take the erect standing position, heels about three inches apart, toes pointing straight ahead and the upper part of the body drawn to its full height. The head should be extended in front of the body on an even line with the shoulders, point turned down. Inhale while swinging the arms as far back as you can. Exhale while bringing them forward again. Inhale while signing the arms high over the head extend side bending them to original position. Repeat until the arms have been swung back 10 times and raised high over the head 10 times.

Exercise 2—Yes. It's the old familiar SQUAT and hard as it is to do at first it's marvelous when it comes to trimming down and firming the muscles of the thighs. Take the correct standing position, but with the balls of the feet about seven inches apart and the heels almost touching. Place the hands firmly on the hips, then, slowly rising to the balls of the feet, lower the body until the backs of the thighs rest on the calves of the legs. Rise slowly and repeat 10 times.

If you have trouble letting yourself go, fearing that you will lose your balance and tumble over, support the weight of your body by grasping some stable object low the foot of the bed then let the body down into the squatting position outlined.

Exercise 3—Stand erect with the torso drawn to its full height and the hands resting lightly on the hips. Heels about two inches apart and toes pointing straight ahead. Inhale while slowly raising the right leg until it is extended straight out in front of the body on a level with the hip socket. Exhale while lowering the leg and inhale while extending the left one. Keep the toes pointing straight out, too, as the leg is extended.

Exercise 4—Keeping the same standing position, swing the right leg out to the side and as far back as you can, keeping the left heel flat on the floor. Repeat with the left leg. Kick back each leg 10 times, then see how far back you can swing each leg by rising up to the ball of the other foot. Always until the exercise has been gone through 10 times for each leg.

finally assembled their complete spring wardrobe, this first spring dress, bought earlier than the other items, won't be something that clashes.

This year in shopping for a spring dress—one that can be worn now as well as in the spring —fashionable women are keeping several things in mind. Things that make the difference between a spring and a winter dress.

New Details

They're looking for such details as straighter skirts front fullness instead of more fullness pouts rather than gores—and these pleats stitched part way down and not released until low down in the skirt.

They're looking for belts or girdles or sashes and for neck-lines that are a little higher than they've been wearing. And for color and color combinations instead of plain black or navy.

They remember while they're shopping that dresses with matching jackets are going to be very fashionable in the spring and that these jacket dresses are practical because in warm weather they can be worn on the street without a coat.

One good idea to choose for this first spring dress would be a jacketed dress of printed silk—a one-piece dress with a matching jacket.

That gives you two good spring fashions—jackets and color, and it's a good way to make the break between the dark winter dress and the light colored spring one.

Contrasting Trim

Another good idea to choose now would be plain color with contrasting trimming. Black with white, perhaps, or navy with beige or light blue.

The left hand sketch shows a color combination like this. And it illustrates one of those fashionable dresses that give the effect of being two-piece. You'll notice that this has front fullness that keeps the skirt quite straight in line, and that the fullness is pleats that are stitched part way down.

Dresses like these look fine under a winter coat. And they'll look fine under a spring coat, too, or coatless when it's warm enough.

What's in Fashion?

Spring Dresses for Now

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Feb. 11—Thought much about your first spring dress—the one you're going to get very soon now . . . or maybe right now?

It's a good idea to do some thinking about it some thinking, too, about the kind of coat you're going to have and whether this new dress will go with the coat to make an ensembled costume.

One of the first things fashion-knowing women do, before they choose this first spring dress, is to plan a definite color scheme for their entire spring wardrobe. Then they choose a dress that fits into this scheme.

Why? So that when they're

Is He Only 'Fooling Round?'

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I would like to know what a girl is supposed to expect when a boy tells her that she is the only one and that he can't see enough of her, but still he accepts an invitation to go to a party without her. Does this show that the boy is fickle or that he is out for a good time, but still loves the girl just as much? The invitation was sent by a girl friend, who knows I am single.

Beatrice Fairfax

Martha Lee

Would this have anything to do with the reason he accepted? Don't you think, if he cares for the girl as much as he says, that he would refuse if he couldn't take her anywhere? I would like to know the correct and polite form—the true lover's point of view—concerning such a matter.

PUZZLED.

Dear Puzzled: Since you have asked me the true lover's point of view, I must say to you that I think a young man who is very deeply in love with one girl would probably not care to accept invitations which did not include her. However, as you are not engaged to the young man, it is perfectly proper for him to accept invitations.

That First Year!

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been married three months. I love my husband, or at least I thought I did. But it frightens me to realize that I do not understand him after all. All his ways are so different from those of my own family. I can't make him over or make myself over. So I am utterly at sea. I beg you to advise me.

PUZZLED BRIDE.

Dear Bride: It's an old story my dear child. Don't be unnecessarily alarmed and lonely because you and your husband have been differently brought up, a fact which should really make you more interesting to each other.

Frosting Mysteries Are No 'Secrets'

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast over station WLEX:

SSH! IT'S NO SECRET at all—this "secret" of making successful frostings and fillings for your cakes. Some body or other started the rumor, which methinks has been fostered by certain jealous cooks that it takes secrets and luck to turn out those resplendent frostings, those creamy fillings. Not at all! All it requires is a good recipe, some reliable ingredients, a little care. Which is all most cooking requires!

The making of smooth and creamy custard fillings is made easy by using cornstarch; the golden dates we use for our most wholesome fillings may be bought already sliced—the fruit jams that go into our fruity cake fillings are packaged to be sliced and candied; flavorings come in a multitude of delicious moments. Truly the frosting-cake has her task made easy!

BEST BOILED FROSTING

2 cups sugar
4 tbsp. light corn syrup
½ cup water
2 egg whites
1 tsp. flavoring

Boil sugar, water and syrup until it spins a thread (220 deg. F.). Pour over stiffly beaten egg white, flavor and beat in water and beat until thick enough to spread.

COCOANUT FROSTING

Use above recipe for boiled frostings, sprinkle shredded cocoanut or cocoanut frostetts in pink, green, orange, toasted or rainbow, generously over surface of frosting.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

P. S.—Don't forget to sharpen up your pencils and send in all your recipes using Mueller's macaroni and spaghetti for the Household Contest. There are $100 in cash prizes for the lucky winners. Send all recipes to the Macaroni Contest Editor, care of Martha Lee, Boston American, Boston. And be sure to attach Mueller's macaroni wrapper to your recipe.

Household Hints

A SNAP CLOTHESPIN is very handy around the cook stove. Use it to nip off hot kettle lids, pull hot saucepans forward and change pie pans around in the oven.

A CLOTHESPIN put in halves, makes two very useful pan scrapers which do not rust or scratch aluminum or enamel ware.

ONE ASPIRIN tablet added to one quart of water will preserve cut flowers from drying much longer. Try it and see.

A CUT APPLE placed in the cake box will prevent cake from drying out quickly.

CRISP HOT WAFFLES serve as a foundation for shortcakes. It is easy and delightful and serves as a change from biscuits.

CLOTHS FOR HOT COMPRESSES can be pressed quite dry in a potato ricer without touching them with the hands.—MRS. INA POTTER, 21 Carmel st., Chelsea.

[illegible] here can it be found? What [illegible] the tired business man and [illegible] housewife take to [illegible] them over the few [illegible] days of the week?

Of course, I am not in favor of any manner of using that [illegible] it necessary to seek artificial stimulation. When he becomes a reality was people, we won't do those foolish things that cause undue fatigue. Sometimes I feel, however, that the pendulum will dash down before we become so sensible.

Late hours with loss of sleep, driving labor for bodies undernourished, rushing after wealth, as well as the struggle for the daily bread—all these are factors that contribute to the breakdown in the health. Perhaps the first sign of such a breakdown is the tired feeling, the terrible fatigue of the late afternoon.

Where is there a food that has in it something of harmless stimulation? The answer is, chocolate and cocoa.

There is a habit better dose of mild stimulation in a bar of milk chocolate than in a glass of whiskey. Soldiers and Marathon runners, writers and lawyers, doctors and housewives have discovered this. If you haven't try it. It is a concentrated food that is almost immediately appropriated by the body and blood.

A cup of cocoa mixed with milk will put life into your tired body. It is an excellent beverage for young and old.

Chocolate and cocoa are two products that deserve greater popularity than they have. The housekeeper will do well to make more use of them.

TIGER HEART -:- -:- By Robert Terry Shannon

"I DON'T admire him at all—but I suppose it's just that I'm used to him," Connie said, thoughtfully. "After all, he is agreeable, and I did throw him pretty hard. He's not bad, he's weak."

"Like the champion who could resist everything but temptation, oh? Well I know a lot like him, and agreeable, too, in their only several ways. I'm glad you don't judge people harshly. If you weren't pretty liberal you couldn't stand for me, you know."

Again something of the previous magnetism began to stir itself up between them—but its force had been lessened by the return of Jim Tracy and his startling story. Connie felt that now she had a better grip on herself.

"We've strayed a long way from our original purpose. I wanted you to come up here and help me about kitty, and so far as I can see she's headed straight for marriage with Jim Tracy. What are we going to do about it?"

But Garson refused to talk seriously. "What can I tell you about other people when I don't know what to do about myself? As a man wants a woman and a woman wants a man, it's such a hideous thing for anyone to stand between them. That's a field I'd never gone into. You see, I have a great deal of sympathy for them both, because I'm beginning to understand something of what they must feel."

His tone was almost mocking, but Connie could not respond in that vein. Whatever she felt toward him—whether it was love or fascination or magnetic attraction it had to be serious.

"I don't like you so well when you try to make jokes of things," she told him.

"Jokes? If you only knew how far I was from joking! Can't you see that I'm frightened to death?"

"Frightened?" Her eyebrows lifted.

"Yes, frightened, terror stricken, panicked. You have me thrilled clean against the wall. I'm afraid to death of you. I've been sitting here hanging on, hoping to get the nerve to tell you how I feel—you're so lovely—so wonderful . . ."

His voice broke and stopped with a heavy emotional silence, as tense as the instant of impending lightning.

WHATEVER it was Duke Garson felt to say to her it was perilously close to a declaration of love was too difficult for easy expression. When he stopped in the midst of it, Connie was glad; she was not, now, ready to hear it; her mood of receptivity had passed and she was determined to hear no more. There would be other days, other nights—

"I'm tired," she said, rising. "Do you mind if I go to bed?"

He was instantly apologetic, with a swift comprehension that their opportune moments had been exhausted.

"Forgive me!" he said, quickly. "Of course, you're tired."

"But, you can sit up as long as you like," she told him, hospitably. "Go to bed when you are ready. If you are hungry there's the icebox—or can I get you something?"

"No, nothing," he told her. "I think I'll sit out here for another cigarette before I turn in myself."

In bed, with a soft breeze blowing across her light cover, Connie was lulled gently towards sleep despite the persistent thoughts that clamored in her mind for attention.

It was comfortable to lie there slowly drifting into slumber, with her entire being saturated with a softly excited feeling of satisfaction. Her mind was upon Duke Garson, and to think of him brought a deep, mysterious comfort. As she thought of him, it was not in a physical way; no desire of the touch of his magnetic hands, or the crushing sensation of his embrace. She had momentarily in reality quite experienced such yearning during the day, but now all of that was instinct, and replaced by a quiet assurance of well being. Nothing in her life no man had ever affected her quite like this. Compared to Duke Garson, the others had been curiously without potency. Jim Tracy had affected her life not at all. Some time, possibly, Duke Garson might accomplish wherein Jim Tracy had failed; but even this, now, was not a thought—it was a thin fragment, half a dream like the wasp of a cloud floating across the moon. Gradually, she had sunk into sleep . . .

In the morning before, naturally, she came awake, Connie, out of her drowsiness sensed another person in her room. A sound, perhaps, roused her—yet so drowsy she was that her eyes did not open.

"Connie! Wake up!"

Her eyes opened and standing beside the bed was her mother, a startled look in her eyes.

Connie sat up sharply, her senses in confusion.

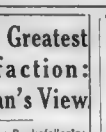
Life's Greatest Satisfaction: Eastman's View

It's Same as Rockefeller's: Giving Employment; Bank Action

—By B. C. Forbes—

New York, Feb. 11—What, think you, has given George Eastman, photo king, the greatest satisfaction in his life.

This 67-year-old business philanthropist has given away perhaps $75,000,000, much of it originally in the name of "Mr. Smith"; he has received all kinds of honors, and at a dinner tendered him this week he was acclaimed by both the French and the Swedish governments; he has developed one of the three most elaborate and efficient scientific research departments in America, and he has done no end of worthy things.



B. C. Forbes

Yet, when I talked to him this week about what had given him most joy in his long and fruitful life, this is what he said.

"What gives me the greatest satisfaction is that to which I attribute the greatest satisfaction of his whole life."

"Of course, I am grateful that the Lord has made it possible for me to do some things which have, perhaps, been helpful in humanity. But what has given me the greatest satisfaction of all is to have taken a part in creating a business organization which has afforded steady employment, at good wages, to a great many heads of families."

A sage once said:

"You must live before you can philosophize."

Both Eastman and Rockefeller, as you will have seen, have put to work worthwhile thing in their life has been to play a part in making it possible for many thousands of men to earn a decent living for themselves and their families. Both have derived real joy from being philanthropists; but even above this joy they rank the satisfaction of having made it possible for a great many families to earn a respectable living.

Indi omens are not convictions. Yet one of the most heartening things which has occurred in New York recently is the unanimous verdict of eight officers and directors of the closed Bank of United States.

They can't imprison $1,000,000, is a common, cynical saying in this country. No Bank of United States officers have yet been placed behind prison bars. But the very fact that a grand jury has indicted them will go far to convince the skeptical public that an earnest effort is being made to punish alleged wrongdoers of wealth and position.

This column was the first to question certain very pertinent questions were asked, there it was very plain to the writer that the institution could not have been run as a bank should be run, otherwise it would not have resorted to the creation of 20 varieties of "dummy" subsidiaries, would not have made so many questionable loans, would not have had to close its doors.

Regardless of the final outcome of the indictment of the bank's chairman, president, vice-president, counsel and others, the vigorous steps taken cannot but have a salutary effect upon bankers who may be also indulging in the imprudent use of money entrusted to them by innocent depositors. There has been altogether too much evidence in this country that bankers are not properly realised that savings entrusted to them are not their own property to use on minute as their inclination suggests.

Incidentally, there is urgent need for a drastic change in the treatment of depositors when a bank fails. It is ridiculous, it is cruel, it is wholly unnecessary that depositors in a bank which closes should always have to wait months and months before they are able to obtain even one cent of their money. It is impossible that the examining authorities make it their business to ascertain the actual conditions and that provisions be promptly made to pay out to depositors a reasonable part of their money.

TOMORROW TO BE HOLIDAY IN MARKETS

By FRANK H. MELOON

Leading stock markets will be closed tomorrow in observance of Lincoln's Birthday, which is a legal holiday in New York. The Boston Stock Exchange, the New York Stock Exchange, the New York Curb Exchange, the New York Produce Exchange, the New York Cotton Exchange, the Chicago Board of Trade and many other security and commodity markets will all be closed.

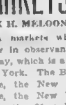
Automobile mileage in the past has generally been accepted as one of the indexes of buying capacity, although not complete in itself, any more than are other such indexes. Report of Massachusetts Commissioner of Corporations Henry P. Long shows taxes paid on motor vehicles in January were about $725,000 in the Commonwealth, as compared with $625,000 in January of 1930. This would indicate more mileage covered, unless we take the view that older cars, requiring more gasoline, are being driven. The gasoline taxes paid increased nearly every month last year as compared with the like month in 1929.



Henry P. Long

If increased gasoline consumption is due to the fact that older cars are being driven, there is a bullish point for the automotive shares, since it indicates the need of replacements.

While the trapping of the overconfident bears was of great assistance to the bulls in marking prices sharply higher, brokers also reported good demand for stocks by outside traders and investors. Attracted by the soaring prices of the last few days, traders in all sections of the country are once again entering the market and buying from this source has been unusually heavy this week.

Leaders of the steel and automobile industries express confidence in the continued improvement in business, and Wall and La Streets are again inclined to look on the bright side of the picture.

Strenuous market days of 1830-31 have already seen a rather numerous list of issues double in price within the space of a period. Thus in some instances, no doubt, speculators have been able to realize the favorite ambition of having a stock appreciate 100 per cent. The current rise has swollen the list of "doublers."

President Paul A. Gow of North Butte Mining Co tells us that notwithstanding past depression, operation of the properties has been paid is being continued uninterruptedly. He says:

"Despite adverse factors, an analysis of the situation demonstrates the basic soundness of the industry. During the 11 months ending Nov. 30 of the current year, the actual world deliveries of refined copper averaged 688,418,000 pounds per month, or slightly more than 90 per cent of the average monthly deliveries of 753,619,000 pounds in 1929, the peak of the industry, indicating that the curtailment will probably done a volume of business substantially equal to that done in 1928, and more than double that done in 1921, the last year of marked depression."

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Market is demonstrating that the public is still stock minded. The bear rout has attracted attention all over the world, bringing the largest outside buying witnessed in recent months. Many believe the pace has been too rapid in last, and that reactions are to be made needed. As a result of increased public confidence, Wall and State St. opinion is that reactions should meet with an improved quality of buying.

Buying in Utility Issues Is Large

The early setback in the industrial stocks and speculative today was followed by another buying rush in the utilities which swept forward to new active shares one to seven points higher.

Coppers Improve on Price Advance

The coppers showed marked improvement, the recommendation Kennecott and American Smelting and others raising as red metal prices rose to 10 cents a pound.

Case and Auburn Display Rivalry

J. I. Case and Auburn Auto displayed rivalry for bullish leadership. Auburn dropped off 10 points in the fast period, then quickly recovered about 9 points, while Case mounted swiftly to 319¾ for a gain of 6 points. The buying rush then turned to the accessories, farm utilities and the year's best prices were recorded in the active gas and electric group, and electric transmission shares. Columbian Carbon led off with a 7-point jump.

Buying Deferred by Nearing Holiday

The rank and file of steel, oil, automobile and manufacturing stocks today were unable to consolidate the swift pace set for them in the first day or two and signs of tiring were seen in many of the favorites. Tomorrow's holiday depressed new buying by outside traders and suggested profit taking on the fast steppers and the market left unsettled most of time to time.

Coppers Under Accumulation?

Coppers were understood to be under accumulation and some firms with red metal connections reported the market was legal. Some copper market with some big consumers making enquiries.

"Socony"-Vacuum Decision Reviewed

Following the announcement that the proposed merger of the Standard Oil Co. of New York and Vacuum Oil Co. was legal, brokers, particularly leading Standard Oil issues turned sharply up. This decision had more importance on the Standard Oil issues because of the business alignments that may ensue between former units of the old Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. One of these talked of mergers is that of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and Standard Oil Co. of California.

Brokers Loans May Increase

There is every expectation of a sizeable increase in brokers' loans this week in fact the Street would receive such as a bullish factor. Brokers have been working on a hand-to-mouth basis in the matter of their bank loans, and some houses have actually been able to take care of their clients' needs without recourse to the banks, so small has been their business.

Objection Made to General Baking Plan

It is understood that a movement is on foot by a number of General Baking stockholders to bring action to prevent the carrying out the proposed plan of recapitalization of the company. This may be the reason for the failure of the stock to respond to the announcement of the plan.

Int. Telephone Is Found Oversold

When International Telephone & Telegraph sold under $200 a share in January, it ran into some of what the Street would term the best ownership lists, both by institutions and individuals. The stock has been a football for the bears and has been thoroughly oversold.

Western Union Is Bought by Investors

Western Union is once more on a true investment basis in the market and there is no pool or group interested in the stock. When it was run up above 200 there was a group of market traders interested in the stock and these got under 200. Now around 140, Western Union is subject to its usual mild investment fluctuations.

Real Silk Hosiery Earns $1,023,816

Earnings of the Real Silk Hosiery Mills for the year ended December 31, 1930, were $1,023,816 before preferred dividends and taxes, equal to $4.18 a share on the common stock of common stock outstanding. This compares with earnings for the year ended December 31, 1929, of $2,028,456 equal to $9.31 a share.

COPPERS RISE IN WALL ST. DEALINGS

New York, Feb. 11—The pre-holiday session of the New York Stock Exchange saw the bulls in control for the fourth consecutive session, with numerous advances recorded.

Profit-taking was invited by the rapidity of the rise and the imminence of the holiday, and appeared in large volume. Trading was at a swift pace most of the session.

COPPERS ARE HIGHER

The share market encountered a wave of profit-taking on the first half hour, and again in the afternoon, but readily turned dull on declines, and swelled to the record volume for the new year as the session progressed.

Coppers and non-ferrous metals were strong in response to firmer metal prices.

Chile Copper, a closely held issue, surged on 6 points, and American Smelting, Nailpo Doore and Grant by minor 2 to 3 points.

Among the volatile specialties Coca Cola, Radio and Allied Chem. up about 9 points.

Future dropped 10½ recovered and was then down a point. Utilities and pivotal industrials were strong.

Shares making extreme gains of 2 to 4 points included American Can, Air Reduction, Air Reduction and Foreign Power, U. S. Steel, Westinghouse, Sculps Doore and Grant by minor 2 to 3 points.

Among the volatile specialties Coca Cola, Radio and Allied Chem. up about 9 points.

DEPRESSION RESISTED

The mid-week business statistics were largely negative in their implications, but the fact that they showed basic industries still able to offer strong resistance to depression were enough to start the week's revival until another consultation.

That relief did not result entirely in the way of positive developments, even if progressive interests of the market found a change of mind inherited from the drastic adjustments of the final months of 1930.

The steel trade reviews showed that ingot output had been increased from 45 to 55 per cent on the Pacific, as taken by motor manufacturers had increased.

The tone of the report was considerably, however, and pointed out that the increase might be misleading in view of the fact that the year without management changes, as it did last year, and that the total for the month will be materially lower than March.

Weekly statistical car loadings showed a slight gain, if anything, since the seasonal trend would indicate.

In addition to copper, silver prices again rallied, reaching 39¢ cents an ounce, up 1¢ on the week. This may have been in response to the report of the Pittman committee of the Senate favoring the formation of an international pool to fix ratio at advance of silver to 32¾.

Industrial's results however, are not encouraging when compared with those of corresponding period last year, when Chino stocks had too much silver and would be helped more by a gold loan.

Arrest of Richeson in Famous Case Is Told

time after burial following startling revelations.

Although the case was reported a suicide after cursory examination, because of outstanding features, such as the girl's grief when she learned her clergyman lover was engaged to another, Dr. Timothy Leary, medical examiner, did not abandon his investigation.

The fact that Miss Linnell died from a dose of cyanide of potassium made him suspicious. Suicides seldom use that poison, because it is too difficult to procure. Avis Linnell died on a Saturday evening. On Tuesday Dr. Leary issued the following statement:

SUICIDE SCOUTED

"After a thorough investigation, I feel that the conditions surrounding the death of Miss Avis Linnell are consistent with the contention of her brother-in-law, William J. MacLean, that she did not intend committing suicide."

Mr. MacLean, a resident of Brockton, husband of Avis' older sister, insisted from the outset that she was a victim of foul play.

When Miss Linnell was found dying in one of several bathrooms at the Y. W. C. A. on Warrenton st., South End, now Hotel La Salle, she was seated on a chair with her feet in mustard water. Walter (Dutch) Mahan, a reporter who fought every engagement with the 101st Infantry as a buck private in France and lived to tell it, unearthed pivotal evidence from attaches of the Y. W. C. A.

The matron and officers told of little feminine preparations which Miss Linnell had made in her bed room that night. These clearly indicated that she expected to be alive next day and thought she was taking headache medicine instead of a violent poison.

TRACING POISON

The next task was to find the person who gave her the cyanide of potassium. That proved a stone wall. The Boston Evening American, desiring to be of public service offered a reward of $1000 for information as to the source of the poison.

Then came the thunderbolt.

William Hahn, a Newton Center druggist, went to his lawyer, former Representative Ellis B. Bishop, and told him he sold cyanide of potassium to Pastor Richeson. Atty. Bishop notified William B. Watts, then deputy superintendent of police in Boston. Deputy Watts hastened to Hahn's drug store and got his story first hand.

Hahn said he first met Richeson when the latter was a student at Newton Theological school of which his father of Violet Edmands, his betrothed fiancee, was trustee. Hahn told Richeson came to his drug store on Friday, Oct. 13, 1911, the day before Avis Linnell died.

POISON FOR A DOG

"He said he wanted poison for a dog," said Hahn. "He told me he wanted to put the animal out of the way. I suggested chloroform, but he objected to the odor. He did not smell badly. He preferred another poison.

"When I suggested cyanide of potassium and said it would result in instant death, Mr. Richeson seemed pleased. 'Throw in a few more pinches,' he said, as I was about to wrap up the cyanide. I told him there was enough in the paper to kill 10 strong men. He thanked me and invited me to attend his wedding. (Invitations to his wedding to Miss Edmands were already in the mail.)

"As Mr. Richeson was about to go he said to me: 'This incident may seem strange and mysterious to you. Can you keep a secret? I haven't bought this stuff from you and I remember you do not know me."

POINTS TO GUILT

Here was another criminal symptom in line with his query as to whether Miss Linnell made a statement before she died and was notified of her death by Miss Hanscomb by telephone from the Y. W. C. A. headquarters. It is cumulative evidence of guilt.

Discovery of the purchase of poison sent the Boston police hot on the trail of Pastor Richeson. They could not find him at the Cambridge lodgings. Hastening to the home of Miss Edmands in the fashionable Chestnut Hill section of Brookline on the night of Oct. 19, 1911, they were unable to gain admittance.

Reporters and police remained outside the Edmands home in a tedious all-night vigil. Next day Oct. 20, a squad of Boston and Brookline police again demanded admittance, but before it was granted, Miss Edmands' father had phoned his attorney and asked if he must open the door to the officers of the law. He was told that he must, and did.

FOUND IN BED

The officers found Pastor Richeson in bed in the guest chamber, up stairs.

"Are you Clarence V. T. Richeson?" asked one of the inspectors.

"I am," replied the young preacher, striving to suppress his agitation.

"I have to inform you that you are under arrest for the murder of Avis Linnell," said the officer. "And I wish to warn you of your rights. Anything you say may be used against you. Have you anything to say?"

"I have nothing to say," replied Richeson.

He dressed under close guard. Once he was forced to sink into a chair. Mr. Edmands asked if he wanted anything and he asked for a glass of warm milk, which he drank slowly.

In the bed room directly across the hall lay Violet Edmands, made ill by the wrenching torment and suspicions attending the tragedy which came on the eve of her wedding to the young minister and lover. Her mother was seated beside her bed. Miss Edmands was weeping and trembling when Richeson asked and was granted permission by the police to enter her room.

TRAGIC FAREWELL

He leaned over and embraced and kissed her. She clung to him desperately. Her sobs filled the bed room. It was a tragic scene in that Brookline mansion soon after dawn.

"You mustn't leave me," cried the prisoner's intended bride. "They shall not take you from me! They shan't! They shan't! Tell them to go away and leave us."

"Don't cry, dear," said Richeson soothingly. He was pale and strangely reconciled now. "Keep up your courage. Good-bye for a while. Everything is going to be all right dear."

He had to tear himself away. This was the last time he ever saw or spoke to Violet Edmands. She never visited him at Charles street jail or State prison.

Richeson's spectacular self-nullifier in his jail cell, his confession and death in the electric chair will be recounted in the final chapter in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

the other with outstretched left arm and fingers.

I paced off its length, picking a narrow path between bed and sanitary bucket, and found it four short steps. In spite of my calm I gave a start when I felt the free space there was. I knocked down something. It was a little calendar with a brightly colored picture of Copley sq. in summer, and with the first days of February checked off.

MAKING BETTER MEN?

The air in the cell was deadly. A tiny open square in the rear wall near the roof represented ventilation. Not a forced draft, just an opening in an air shaft stretching hopefully toward the sky.

The narrow, barred door admitted air which 270 other prisoners in the third wing down which I walked, air from over the railroad yards, filled with cinders, which saturate the prison workshops, the cell blocks, the cells and the bedding.

Such is the place where a man is confined, whom the State hopes will emerge a saner, better human being.

In tomorrow's Boston Evening American the writer will further reveal conditions at the Charlestown State Prison from his personal inspection.)

THE MYSTERY OF GERALDINE

By ANTHONY ABBOT

vestigation of a crime, the conduct of a war, or any other thing in human affairs. As he gave the slips into the commissioner's hands, Mr. Pearlman explained that every one of the pillow and cases was accounted for by those little pieces of paper.

Seven stores had bought those cases. Carefully made stenographic notes of teh names and addresses, and cutting short the effusive conversation of Mr. Pearlman, who would have a great story to tell his undoubtedly horrified wife at the dinner table that night, we hurried off, Thatcher Colt, Gernsback and I, to make the round of the shops.

They were in widely separated areas. Again we were in an automobile—Neil McMahon was at the wheel, driving fast to a little drygoods and notions shop on Third ave. The proprietor was a loud-voiced, heaving and asthmatic Irish woman, who was not the pressed at all by the three of us, but immediately on hearing our questions called down a pox on both on the maker of those pillow cases. She has bought them at a bargain, and yet had never been able to sell one pair of them. They were still on her shelves. We counted them up, checking them against the quantity indicated on the delivery sheet and found that her explanation was justified. . . She still had them all.

Again we sallied forth, and again luck favored Thatcher Colt. We found ourselves at the store of one Joseph Schnuts, a dealer in household furnishings, in Fourteenth st., and to Thatcher Colt's delight he learned at once that Mr. Schnuts was a man of accounts and entries, a careful merchant who had exhaustive records of all his transactions.

"Did you buy any pillow cases like this one?" asked Thatcher Colt, thrusting the piece which Gernsback had used, under his eyes.

Indeed he had. Mr. Schnuts fervently declared that he considered those pillow cases the most beautiful he had ever handled in his 35 years as a merchant in this neighborhood.

"Did you ever sell any of them?" asked Thatcher Colt.

Mr. Schnuzz eadly shook his head.

"Only one pair," he replied. "The people of today are altogether lacking in an artistic appreciation of beautiful things."

But did he know to whom he had sold them?

"I remember the sale perfectly," said the merchant to Thatcher Colt. "It was a lady with a little girl—pretty little girl—who bought that pair of pillow cases. After she saw them in the window. Where is that sales check?"

Colt Waited

With folded arms and an expression of deepest melancholy, Thatcher Colt waited. He did not seem in the slightest degree disconcerted when the merchant, having found the paper he sought, put his glasses on the tip of his nose and calmly read from one of his awful slips

"The name was Mrs. Felise Morgan of 186 Washington sq., North."

The pillow slip which was found over the head of the buried Geraldine Foster had been purchased by the mother of little Doris Morgan.

At once I became a prey to the most hideous and fantastic suspicions.

First it seemed to me as this latest discovery completely shattered all possibility of Doctor Maskell innocence. In another instant my rapid-changing theories would clear the physician, only to conjure before me an entirely different and unthinkable accusation.

Had Felise Morgan killed Geraldine Foster?

Even at this late date, when so many of the clues were already obviously at hand, even after what Thatcher Colt had said to me, I rejected the idea as impossible. A woman wield that murderous axe and dealt awful blows, and then, alone and unaided, bury that body after soaking it in a bathtub full of tannic acid? I felt like shuddering at the very notion.

Why should Felise Morgan want to kill Geraldine? Unless it was because she was in love with Doctor Maskell and was jealous or afraid. The mother of little Doris must be the woman whose name the physician had kept so loyally.

I glanced at Thatcher Colt, beside whom I sat in the department car. He was watching me with an amused and almost paternal smile.

Doctor in Love

"It's had to figure out, isn't it?" he said banteringly. "But one thing now is perfectly clear."

"What is that?"

"Dr. Maskell is in love with Felise Morgan."

"You think that a woman as lovely—"

"I put nothing beyond the possibilities. God knows that women have killed women before, and they have not scrupled to use an axe, if it suited their purposes."

"Is that why, do you think, Dr. Maskell is so secretive about it?"

"Did you notice the love beaming in his eye as when he looked at Doris the day we rode around town in the car?"

"I did observe that."

"For that child he would do anything. He is a case of mad jealousy. I suppose, Maskell would rather take all the blame even if innocent than allow the life of that little girl. He may even think Felise is guilty. Incessantly remembers Ruth Snyder and her child."

"Do you actually think Mrs. Morgan is guilty?"

Thatcher Colt shook his head in plain perplexity.

"That is what I have come here to find out," he replied.

We were at the north side of Washington sq. once more in front of the house in which Dr. Maskell had his offices, and on the second floor of which lived Doris Morgan and her beautiful mother.

As we started up the stairs, a man passed us, coming out. He was a thick set, heavy shouldered man, wrapped in a large fur overcoat, and he hurried down the street with a swaggering, self-conscious gait. As he passed us, he gave us one disdainful glance. The next moment, some one else ran down the steps, chattering in a low voice to himself. It was Checkles, the doctor's hunchbacked chauffeur, and he was hurrying hert on following the first man.

"Just seeing where he goes—I suspect him," came Checkles to Thatchey Colt, as he leaped to the sidewalk and hopped away.

"Who on earth is the man Checkles is following?" I asked.

"That is Gilbert Morgan—the father of Doris, and the husband of Felise."

Charming Home

I was tingling with suspense as we approached the door of the Morgan apartment, the same door before which we had stood the night we had first visited Betty's apartment. After ringing, we had barely time to catch our breath before the door was opened by a tall, long-armed woman with severe features and thin black hair brushed tightly over her head. She looked at us with eyes that seemed to burn their way past all our barriers of caution. She recognized Colt at once; he had been here before.

"Mrs. Morgan will see you in a moment," she said. "Please come in."

She led us down a wide hall, charmingly but not overly decorated, into a small cabinet-like place that opened off the grand drawing-room at the end. Here we were left, to study the charming water colors on the wall, especially one square of a painted sail, which, as I learned later, had been done by Felise she was an accomplished artist. I looked at Thatcher Colt and was about to speak, when a scraping foot-step made me turn. To my astonishment, I saw an old woman creeping into the room. For all her extreme age and feeble condition, she was looking from my face to Thatcher Colt with eager and intelligent curiosity.

"Don't tell her I came in here, will you?" the old woman croaked, in a deep whisper.

For the second time this week, groundfish receipts at the Fish Pier went over the 1,000,000 pound mark. Fine weather and the abundance of the run on the various fishing grounds were described as good for this time of year which is usually marked by small totals. The big haul was made by 39 vessels of the large fleet in which group were six beam trawlers. Monday's supply was a record. Totals recorded were, 3,104,000 pounds of haddock; 229,000 pounds of cod; 17,500 pounds of halibut; 19,000 pounds of cusk; 4000 pounds of pollock; 4000 pounds of scallops; 4000 pounds of redfish; 2000 pounds of flounders and 133,100 pounds of mixed fish.

REPAIRS UNDER WAY

Installation of the new propeller shaft and propeller on the U. S. Shipping Board steamer West Kyska, operated by the Waterman Steamship Co., will tie the big transatlantic freighter up for 13 days and cost $17,000. Cargo will not be disturbed. One of the stern plates is being taken off to get into the shaft alley. The West Kyska was en route from Gulfport, Pensacola and Mobile for Liverpool, Manchester and Glasgow. In the teeth of a heavy gale, she dropped her propeller and radioed for assistance. The U. S. Shipping Board steamer Seon reached her shortly before the U. S. Coast guard cutter Champlain. The Seon towed her into Boston under the convoy of the Champlain.

BOSTONIANS ABOARD

A group of Bostonians, passengers from Holyoke and Springfield and other New England cities, left to sail today on the S. S. Fort St. George, Furness Bermuda Line, for an extended cruise of the Windward and Leeward Islands, Barbadoes and Trinidad, when the liner leaves with full complement of cruise passengers. Bostonians booked were Mr. and Mrs. Stratford Wentworth and Constance Wentworth, Mrs. Everett Moss, jr., and Miss Ruth Gardiner. Dr. and Mrs. William A. Reid, Mrs. D. A. Coats, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Lee of Holyoke; and P. F. Burdick of Springfield are on the list. Mrs. Alexander L. Kitchener and Mrs. Ogden W. White of New Haven, Conn., are due to make the sailing.

MAIDEN TRIP

A blizzard which kept him on the bridge for 48 hours was the only event reported by Capt. T. H. Morgan as his command, the U. S. Shipping Board steamship Tweedbank, Bank Line, made her debut in Boston harbor on her first crossing of the Atlantic. She is docked at Pier 3, East Boston. After leaving the yards of her builders in Belfast Ire., she was commissioned in October and went direct to the Orient picking up cargo at Shanghai, Hong Kong, Sourabaya, Batavia, Belawan, Deli and Colombo. She made the run here from Colombo in 27 days. Capt. Morgan is still knocking off the time previously in command of the S. S. Comliebank.

JEWS VICTORS IN BRITAIN'S NEW PACT

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE
Universal Service Special Cable

(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service)

London, Feb. 11—The lobbies of the House of Commons boiled today with reports that on Thursday or Friday the government will publish a new white paper on British policy in Palestine.

The white paper, it is stated on good authority, purports to be an "interpretation" of the white paper regarding Palestine published last fall, which has been severely criticized and attacked as anti-Zionist.

At the moment it appears that the new pronouncement will constitute an almost complete reversal of the policy laid down by Lord Passfield, colonial secretary, and Winston Churchill in the compensation agitation against Prime Minister MacDonald's tactics, if Conservative react as now predicted.

The government's latest attitude is reported to be a backdown and concession to Zionists on every point, save the single instance of refusing to abandon the proposed new Jewish Legislative Assembly in the Holy Land.

The Arab junta in London, Universal Service is privately informed, already secretly apprised of the forthcoming white paper, has commanded its agents in the Arab Grand Mufti in Jerusalem.

Our Schools Upheld

1928 Survey Refutes Charges; Let Us Correct Minor Faults but Not Destroy.

In the spring of 1928, a distinguished committee, including President Lowell of Harvard, began a survey of the Boston schools which lasted for two years.

This survey was undertaken because of the suspicion that the high standard of our public school education had deteriorated, especially in academic instruction, and that our educators had meandered into the ethereal field of fads and fancies.

That committee, upon the conclusion of its exhaustive search, reported unanimously as follows:

"Notwithstanding certain defects in the present school system, for the correction of which recommendations have been made in this report, the Survey Committee is of the opinion that, in general, THE SCHOOLS ARE SOUNDLY ADMINISTERED AND THE ACADEMIC INSTRUCTION ON A SUBSTANTIAL BASIS."

Academic instruction is the backbone of public education, and so long as it is sound and firm, so long as it is "on a substantial basis," as this committee of experts found it to be, the causes of suspicion and worry should have been totally eliminated.

This distrust was at no time shared by the people of Boston who are in constant contact with the public schools through their own children, in whose destiny their hearts and hopes are bound.

In fact, through this newspaper and through other newspapers, the Committee sought the complaints of the parents who might feel that the Boston schools had sunk from their unusually high standards. The response was negligible.

These facts, which are impressive facts, should be borne in mind today when the sharpshooting and sniping at the historic Boston school system has been renewed.

If there are "certain defects" in the school system, they are not fundamental, nor do they seem to be sufficient to produce the carnival of criticism which has been popularized the past few weeks.

Let us proceed to cure such defects, but while we are doing it, let us be mindful that Boston's schools won for Boston the world-wide reputation of being the "Athens of America" and that we should be the last to undermine that reputation by unwarranted petty fault-finding.

We May Be Proud

Governor's Island Transfer Means Much to Boston.

Congress has passed and the President has signed the bill authorizing the transfer of Governor's Island in Boston Harbor to the city of Boston.

Here, in conjunction with the present splendid airport, will be constructed the greatest airport in the world adjacent to the heart of a metropolitan population.

Boston thus should become the mecca of coastal as well as transcontinental and transatlantic aviation, and should become the substantial transfer depot for from ship-to-shore fast mail.

When this plan is consummated, the enlarged Boston airport will become a monument to the sagacity and perception of Mayor Curley because our city will have been placed in a strategical position to accommodate the extraordinary development of aviation the next fifty or hundred years.

Development of Governor's Island possesses the added advantage of affording continuous employment for 1000 artisans and workers at a time when they need it and at a time when the city will derive the benefit of low construction costs.

It is a project of which we may all feel proud.

Rail Facts Needed

Governor Ely, in his inaugural message, advised the Legislature to create a permanent, fact-finding committee of its own members in order that they may keep the State and the people adequately informed upon the serious railroad problem now confronting us.

The developments of the last few days have reached a crisis in our railroad life, which more than justifies the recommendation which the Governor made last month with remarkable perception.

A terrific contest is going on for control of our New England railroads. The Pennsylvania Railroad has acquired at least partial control of the Boston and Maine and the New Haven, while the Van Sweringens boldly and frankly propose a comprehensive plan under which our New England railroads would be apportioned among six of the major trunk line systems of this country.

This situation offers many advantages to New England.

And it contains the very serious danger that New England control of its own railroads may be utterly vitiated and the transportation system of the six New England States lost to alien organizations whose primary interests lie elsewhere.

New England cannot afford to let this serious situation drift until we wake up some fine morning to find that we are tied to Wall Street or Broad Street beyond our power to extricate ourselves and regain our independence.

The people are entitled to be informed of the actual developments from day to day. They are entitled to have a definite, protective policy moulded in their behalf. The information should be ascertained and the policy should be moulded, as Governor Ely suggests, by a committee of legislators elected by the public and directly responsible to the public.

Listen, World!—Great Book

By ELSIE ROBINSON

You Must Respect Yourself

A GREAT BOOK, and a terrible one—Fannie Hurst's "Back Street."

The story of Ray Schmidt, who lived in the back street of Walter Saxel's life. Beautiful, warm, abundant, Ray Schmidt, with her easy kisses and her eager hands—most people will say she was a bad woman. Yet she had all the virtues of great goodness. She was faithful, loving and generous, patient, brave and utterly unselfish. And, though she lived cheaply, no taint ever entered her soul. To the last, she was child-like in her simplicity and sweetness. But—she did live cheaply, and that was her great sin. Her sin against herself. She did not harm Walter Saxel, nor his wife, nor their children. But she did harm herself. She had no respect for herself—put no price on herself—

Elsie Robinson

And that is the deadliest thing a human can do to his life.

What's that mysterious phrase in the New Testament—"The sin against the Holy Ghost"? They called it the "unforgivable sin." To sin against the living spirit within oneself—to cheapen and waste that sacred, secret spark—Life doesn't forgive that.

Ray Schmidt did that. She was born into a rare body—born, rather splendidly, with a fire in her that drew men and a power to quicken and comfort. She could have lived richly and been treasured—if she'd treasured herself. But she didn't. She loved—and felt that one should put no price on loving. And so, because she did not value herself, she had no value to others—

There's a hideous picture of her, near the end—scrambling for coins in a Parisian restaurant. Ray Schmidt, who had bloomed so splendidly, like a great flower, "down on all fours, her back bare and with a ridge down its middle, which she could never quite reach with a powder puff, fingers groping among cuspidors and table legs and feet-of-the-evening, for rolling coins."

Scrambling for coins to buy gibelets—eating refuse—digging bloody chicken feet out of garbage barrels—

She came to that—and worse. Some will say the man sent her to that. But no man could have sent Ray Schmidt to that if she'd respected herself. She didn't. She thought she shouldn't. She thought love came before self-respect—that you mustn't put a price on love—that if you loved, love would take care of you—

She'd been a good business woman. She had known how to put a price on laces and buttons and millinery trimmings. She had known the value of such trivial things—and respected that value. But she didn't respect the value of herself—

So many women feel like that! It's the romantic gallant tradition for women to feel like that. "The world well lost for love"—thoughts of the future? The woman who loves should take no thought. She should trust her future to love. Love will reward her. Love will protect her.

It won't! That theory listens pretty, but it lives wrong. We've no right to abandon our lives, even in the name of love.

For life is more important than love. And the right love helps life—promotes life. If love doesn't serve life—if it wastes and frustrates life—then love becomes as vicious as hate. And life revenges herself by giving you just what you asked for—nothing.

Why are so many good women, who "never think of themselves," who "live for their lives for others," unappreciated? Why are they snubbed in their youth, neglected in their old age? Why are good women treated like that? For exactly the same reason that bad women are treated like that. They don't respect themselves, and others hold them as cheaply as they held themselves.

Every American woman should read that book. It is, I believe, the greatest book that has ever been written for woman—for any woman.

Words of the Wise Men

Roses have thorns and silver fountains, mud. —Shakespeare.

The best thing one can do is to cultivate one's garden.—Voltaire.

It seems to be nearly impossible to be moderate. If we are calm and deliberate enough to be just, we're almost sure to be indifferent.
—Russell.

Resemblance of humor and opinion, a fancy for the same business or diversion, is ground for affection.
—Collier.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

They Are Different Off Stage

NEW YORK, Feb. 11—Last evening I met an actor and actress who are teamed up in a smutty blackout in a revue. It is a skit portraying an undressing scene in a bedroom with off color comment that would gag a self-respecting buzzard. Yet in the protective coloring of a cafe they were different.

Nor do I believe they were "acting." He addressed her formally and in strictly drawing room manner. Their conversation was that of two clean minded persons over coffee cups. It was such a disillusionment I later questioned the actor.

He said:

"She is a lady who is unfortunately cast in a vulgar part. It is no more a phase of her than jazz would be in a cathedral. You may have noticed she smokes cigarette after cigarette in our sketch. They were cubebs. She does not even use tobacco."

This on and off demeanor of stage folk is a phenomenon difficult to grasp. Yet it does exist. As a press agent for Ziegfeld, three ladies, appearing nightly and scantily draped in tableaux vivants, were asked to appear in a stockingless episode in Central Park.

All stormily refused. On the stage they regarded semi-nudity an art. But off stage a mere gesture for tabloid exploitation — something cheaply vulgar. And no amount of persuasion could induce them otherwise.

Earl Carroll tells me that in many instances ladies of his ensemble who did not hesitate a second to appear nightly garbed in the spotlight were off stage the most modest and best behaved in the company. They blush easily and otherwise show a naivete.

On the other hand many hard-boiled actresses are cast for softly feminine roles. In these parts their cultural attenuations are superbly drawn. Yet off stage they gulp gin raw, swear like stevedores and otherwise add to the oddly depressing merriment of night clubs.

* * *

A wealthy New Yorker with a big estate on coastal South Carolina has a number of coal black employes, reared in the section. Excellent servants, they are paid wages of 30 years ago. Recently dissension developed. News of successful brothers and sisters up north reached them. On his last visit, the owner heard they were to quit. He knew one aged servant eavesdropped. So in the living room after dinner he winked at a guest and observed: "I see by New York papers 80,000 negroes are hopeless in the city and that 40,000 slept in the snow last night in Central Park." No more rumbles from the servant quarters!

From an evening paper: "When he entered his office he seemed perturbed. He frowned several times and pushed a paper off his desk with a rustle. When his secretary arrived, he only half smiled."

Get a guy like that really mad and he'll pish tush you!

* * *

Those who used to sneak up back alleys and crawl through coal holes to land the newspaper scoop look back on our exploits with a foolish grin. On Park Row today the "scoop" or "beat" receives little notice. Instead of fighting each other, newspapermen learned that in unity is strength and in this show sense. A "scoop" was rarely known outside newspaper circles anyway.

The "scoop" caused the greatest personal embarrassment I ever knew. The home paper carried the headline: "Local Boy Off For Big City Newspaper Post." The post was a $12 a week cub reportership. Three weeks later I was home again picking my teeth in front of the Park Central and hoping something would turn up in the way of employment.

I still think scooping me was shabby. With a reporter on the opposition paper I was to watch the home of a banker suspected of huge defalcation. He lived in a lonely suburb. Long after midnight with everything quiet I slipped off to a depot short order restaurant for a sandwich. Before going back to the job I telephoned my editor: "Everything O. K. out here." He replied: "Fine. But you overlooked one minor detail. Your banker committed suicide twenty minutes ago."

Stalin, Powerful Russian

Human Nature, Millions of Years Old, Is More Powerful

STALIN, POWERFUL RUSSIAN LEADER

Stalin, autocrat of Russia, ceaselessly interesting, tells his followers that they must do the work of fifty years in ten years and they "must acquire technical knowledge or perish in a world that is hostile to them."

RUSSIA will not perish, and the Russian people will not perish, although the theories in which Stalin now thinks he believes, may and probably will perish.

No man has ever succeeded in inventing a new kind of human nature or human race, and no one can permanently run human beings on a theoretical plan.

It is as impossible as creating a new language.

Men are controlled, not by the doctrines of Karl Marx or the power of Stalin, but by three primitive instincts—SELF-PROTECTION, LOVE OF FAMILY and AMBITION.

They want to live in THEIR own way. They want to control their OWN families.

They want to get ahead in the world, acquire property and have the right to its peaceable possession.

You cannot eradicate from human beings, Russians or others, the instincts that have controlled them for more than a million years.

Stalin undoubtedly is an executive genius possessed of terrific will power.

The Russian people, as a whole, are enthusiastically with him. In Stalin's desperate effort to change Russia from an agricultural, Asiatic people to a modern industrial race of the western type in ten years, wonderful things may be done. And our industrialists in America may be taught something they don't yet know.

But in the long run, Russians, like others, will go back to a system based on individual ambition and its achievements.

Boston Is Honored

William J. Barrett, a South Boston boy and graduate of Tech, has been invited by Colonel Arthur Woods to organize the national commission which will plan substantive policies to prevent future business depressions and the social policies to abate the sufferings and miseries caused by them. Boston is honored by the selection of this upstanding young man for this post of responsibility. And the country can look forward to the prospect that some real good will come from his selection because here have been evolved most of the social-welfare principles, such as workmen's compensation, unemployments insurance and old-age pensions, which at least reduce the actual hardships of our severe economic life.
